Long-Range Housing Bill Will Go to Senate Today

Committee Rejects Proposal to Ban Racial Segregation In Federal Program

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

With strong bipartisan support the Senate Banking Committee today will send to the Senate a bill making the most sweeping attack in the Nation's history on the twin problems of slum clearance and low-cost public housing.

Before approving the bill yesterday, the committee defeated, 10 to 2, a move to write in a proviso banning racial segregation in the 810,000 public housing units contemplated in the measure.

The segregation ban, which supporters of the bill feared would kill its chances entirely, was offered by Senators John W. Bricker (R., Ohio) and Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), who were the only ones to vote for it. Both Bricker and Cain joined by Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.), then voted against the entire measure.

May Fight on Floor

Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) told reporters that Bricker served notice he would carry the fight for the segregation amendment to the floor and continue opposition to the bill as a whole.

The Senate has already decided to take up a change in its rules to curb filibusters before proceeding to other business.

Thus, Maybank pointed out, it will be up to the Democratic leadership when the housing bill will be debated in the Senate. There was some speculation, however, that this and the bill to restore the reciprocal trade program may be taken up before action on the rules change is completely finished. The Senate may temporarily lay aside the filibuster curb as unfinished business.

The gigantic housing measure, which can cost up to an estimated 308 million dollars a year for 40 years, will go before the Senate with the strongest committee support any housing measure has recently won.

Those For It

Voting for it were Senators Robert F. Wagner (D., N. Y.), William Fulbright (D., Ark.), J. Allen Frear, jr. (D., Del.), Paul Douglas (D., Ill.), John Sparkman (D., Ala.), Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.), Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.) and Maybank. Senator Homer Capehart (R., Ind.) was absent.

Robertson told reporters he voted against the bill in committee because he regarded it as a threat to private industry in the building field.

Major provisions of the bill, which represents a compromise between Administration and Republican-backed measures, are:

1. Construction of 810,000 public housing units within six years, to be built at the rate of 135,000 a year with the President having authority to increase production to 250,000 annually or cut it to 50,000.
2. A 1½-billion-dollar slums clearance program to help cities and States clean up blighted areas and resettle slum dwellers.
3. A $262,500,000 four-year rural housing program to be handled by the Agriculture Department.
4. A broad Government program of research in the housing field to lower the cost of building.

Love for Mystic Professor Led Her to 'Destiny,' Sally Says

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

It was her ill-starred love for Max Otto Koischwitz, brooding, mystic professor and writer, that led her into the coils of Nazi propaganda broadcasts, Miss Mildred E. Gillars (Axis Sally) told an intent District Court jury yesterday.

After declaring of Koischwitz, "of course I loved him," the defendant, tossing back her head so that her long, silvery-gray curls cascaded over her shoulders, continued:

"I consider Professor Koischwitz to have been my destiny . . . I believe people are the result of other human beings who have been in their lives and I believe without the presence of Dr. Koischwitz in my life I would not be fighting for my life today."

(Miss Gillars is charged with treason stemming from her wartime broadcasts over the German short-wave radio, a charge that could result in a death sentence.)

"If you've been happy," the witness continued, "you must be prepared at any time to accept a lifetime of misery—it must mean that much to you."

She continued: "I come from a race of people persecuted for 900 years . . . You will never be able to beat the Irish, and I'm thankful to the Irish people for the courage they have given me to face this."

(Professor Koischwitz, former Hunter College, New York, professor, a naturalized American, returned to Germany in 1939. He had been associated with Miss Gillars in German radio work previous to his death in 1944.

(Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin had described, in his opening statement, a sort of Svengali-Trilby relationship between Koischwitz and Miss Gillars, with the former exerting a "hypnotic influence.")

Throughout her testimony, the black-frocked, slim 48-year-old defendant emphasized her love for America and said that she conceived the idea of interviewing captured GIs for the sole purpose of aiding them and their families.

She had been relatively content with her earlier work on the German radio—that of mistress of ceremonies on what she asserted were nonpropagandistic programs, she testified.

But it was not long before the shadowy figure of the professor began pressing her to join him in political broadcasts beamed to

Medical Care Plan Offered By VA Official

Dr. Magnuson Urges Semi-Free, Locally Run Diagnostic Clinics

A new approach to a national program of medical care was proposed here yesterday by Dr. Paul B. Magnuson, chief medical director of Veterans Administration.

The Magnuson plan calls for creation, through local initiative, of a network of clinics to provide thorough diagnostic examination on a pay-what-you-can-afford basis. Treatment would be left to the private physicians.

Proper medical examination is a major item in the individual's cost of medical care, Dr. Magnuson said. His plan, he pointed out, would particularly help the middle-income families, which are not eligible for free charity care and can't afford expensive examination.

Local Control Emphasized

Under the Magnuson plan, the diagnostic clinics would be subsidized for annual losses by Federal, State, and local governments, and by private agencies. Local boards would determine the payment of the medical examination for each patient. Universities and medical schools would manage the program in each State.

"Key to the success of this plan lies in local control," Dr. Magnuson declared.

The Magnuson approach differs from both the President's compulsory medical insurance program and from the program of the American Medical Association.

The AMA plan proposes creation of a new department of health headed by a physician who would serve with Cabinet rank. Federal subsidies to State-administered funds would finance medical care to persons unable to afford the services.

Truman Plans Message

The Administration plan, its sponsors say, would provide health insurance for 125 million persons, with services paid out of payroll deductions similar to Social Security operations. Both patients and doctors would have free choice in the arrangements, which would be administered on a local level. President Truman said yesterday he will renew his advocacy of compulsory health insurance in a special message to Congress in the next several weeks.

Dr. Magnuson made it clear he was offering his plan as an individual citizen and doctor, and not as a Government official.

A nationally prominent orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Magnuson came to VA from Chicago three years ago to set up the Deans committee program whereby the best medical brains and skill in country were

Bolling Base Chapel Blaze Laid to Airman

Purported Confession Says He Was Spurned As Sabbath Teacher

A 19-year-old Bolling Air Force Base airman reportedly confessed last night that he set fire to the base chapel, early yesterday causing $75,000 damage, "because I was not permitted to teach Sunday school."

He was placed in the guard house under a charge of arson.

Col. S. D. Grubbs, commanding officer of the base, announced that Pfc. George F. Falterman of New York City, a fire stoker at the base, admitted starting the blaze by pouring lighter fluid over bundles of clothing inside the church destined for European families.

The colonel said Falterman also admitted having started a fire at Station Hospital last December "for enjoyment of the flames." That fire, which had been unsolved until yesterday, did little damage.

4 Firemen Injured

Four base firemen were injured in the chapel blaze, which destroyed almost a ton of clothing collected by Washington Air Force personnel for destitute families overseas. The fire was discovered at about 12:40 a. m. by Lieut. Junior Viehman as he headed for his quarters.

Colonel Grubbs said Falterman, who was first suspected during the firefighting because of his "unusual interest" in the blaze was arrested yesterday at 10 a. m. and subjected to cross-examination.

Falterman was quoted as saying he went to the chapel shortly after midnight, spilled a can of lighter fluid on the clothing, started the blaze and "enjoyed it for 30 minutes before departing."

Worked Hard as Volunteer

Maj. John F. Blackistone, of 3238 13th st. se., the air provost marshal at Bolling, said he placed Falterman under surveillance during the fire.

The airman "looked suspicious," although he "worked hard" as a volunteer in helping Station Hospital ambulance corpsmen treat four firemen overcome during the smoke, Major Blackistone said.

Bolling officials said Falterman had frequently asked Chaplain (Maj.) Albert Karnell, base chaplain, for permission to teach Sunday School. The chaplain had refused, it was explained, because he thought it was not in the best interests of the children attending the school.

Investigation of Falterman, after he was placed under arrest, was conducted by Maj. Joseph J. DeRadd of 3328 Gunston rd., Alexandria, and Inspectors Raymond L. Petro, 4613 Blue Plains dr. sw., and

Outgrowth of Court Decision

FCC Taking Steps to Deny Phone Service for Gambling

The Federal Communications Commission has taken steps to deny telephone service for gambling and other illegal activities.

Telephone companies affiliated with the Bell system including the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. have been asked to file tariff schedules incorporating their policy of denying telephone service for such illegal uses as gambling, an FCC spokesman said

An official of the C. & P. Co. here stated that the company is preparing to file a schedule in accordance with the commission's request. The official emphasized that the company has always had an established policy of denying service where a known illegal use is involved.

The action of the FCC, initiated originally on January 1, was an outgrowth of a decision by the Ninth United States Circuit Court of Appeals upholding the right of Western Union to deny wire service to a "bookie" organization.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay said his office is "definitely considering" the application of the Ninth Circuit decision to control of gambling in the District of Columbia.

"We are well aware of the decision," he said, "and have been seriously studying its application to the interstate problem with which the District of Columbia is faced, where gambling headquarters are maintained in surrounding areas outside of the District."

Fay said the study of the telephone decision was in connection with the antigambling grand jury investigation now in progress.

Hoover Unit Urges GAO Changes

Group Widely Split On Controversial Subject; Hot Fight In Congress Looms

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Hoover Commission on Reorganization of the Executive Branch of the Government yesterday proposed new Government accounting methods, including changes in the General Accounting Office.

The commission's own report indicated how controversial the subject is. A seven-man majority of the 12-member commission adopted the report. The other five members split four ways: (1) "comments" by Commission Vice President Dean Acheson; (2) "reservations" by Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) and Carter Manasco; (3) a "separate statement" by Commissioner James H. Rowe, and (4) "additional comments" by Commissioner James K. Pollock.

There were promises that the much-divided report will meet sharp opposition in Congress. Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren, head of GAO and former Congressman, spent most of yesterday at the Capitol. According to his office, he was "calling on friends."

Gave Fight Warning

Several weeks ago Warren, in a bristling statement, gave the commission warning that any effort to trim GAO would meet a congressional fight so stormy it might wreck the entire reorganization program.

The majority report sought to take a middle ground in its recommendations involving GAO. It proposed creation of the position of "accountant general" in the Treasury Department. He would "prescribe general accounting methods and enforce accounting procedures . . . subject to the approval of the Comptroller General."

It was this recommendation that brought the dissents. McClellan and Manasco leaped to Warren's side.

"We have been reluctant to present minority views," they declared. "But when the commission goes afield of its jurisdiction and makes recommendations and attempts changes in an agency of the Congress, we are compelled to dissent."

They declared the proposal would require legislation transferring accounting from GAO to the Treasury. "We do not believe," they asserted, "Congress will consent."

Two Go Other Way

Pollock and Rowe, however, went the other way. They carried the fight to Warren, backing up their position with charges tinged with sarcasm:

"In spite of the fact that the public has been led to believe that the Comptroller General is the watchdog of the Treasury," they argued, "this official is not always blameless in the decisions he makes.

"The Comptroller General's judgment is not infallible, and the intimation is that his decisions may on occasion be influenced by partisan considerations."

Pollock and Rowe argued that the President should be held responsible for the financial management of the Government, and that GAO and the Comptroller General should be a "General Auditing Office and Auditor General."

"This office," they said, "should not keep accounts but should post audit the accounts and financial documents of the Accountant Gen-

President Seated at $100-a-Plate Dinner

President Hints Appeal To People on His Program

'Special Interests Fighting Us' in Congress, He Says At Victory Dinner

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

President Truman hinted last night that he would take his legislative program to the country, in a repetition of his whirlwind campaign tour, if it bogs down in Congress.

Speaking at the $100-a-plate Jefferson-Jackson Victory Dinner at the Statler Hotel, the President told 3500 deliriously happy Democrats:

"I am happy to be up here talking to you once more from the same old stand.

"Incidentally, this is right where I expected to be."

Then he spoke of "determined opposition" to his program from "special interests" for whom "campaigns and elections are just preliminary exhibition matches—the fight in Congress is the main bout."

May Do It Again, He Says

In his campaign tour last fall, he said, he found the people vitally interested in their Government and what it was doing. This, he added, was "a fine thing for the growth of democracy and responsible government."

"I propose to do all I can to help it along," he said. "In fact, I may even get on the train again and make another tour around the country to tell the people how their Government is getting on."

At the Mayflower earlier, Mr. Truman said he was "sure the people are with us in our efforts to implement the Democratic platform of 1948."

Speaking extemporaneously, he said the people "believed us when we said that was what we intended to do. And they are going to stay with us while we do it."

The President raised a storm of laughter and applause when he reminded his audience that:

"I stood right here the 19th of February, 1948, and told you that you were looking at the next President. Well——"

"There were a lot of people at that time," he said, "who didn't agree with me—I'm sorry to disappoint them.

"And Wednesday Democrats"

"I'm most happy to have together all the September Democrats and the October Democrats and the Monday Democrats. And the Tuesday Democrats." Here he paused, and added: "And the Wednesday Democrats."

Mr. Truman was introduced by Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, Democratic National chairman. McGrath spoke of the Democratic victory last November and then said:

"I speak of victory when in fact I mean the winning of an opportunity. Victory will not be achieved until we have fulfilled to the letter our promises to the American people and carried forward to fuller accomplishment the programs of the Democratic Party for social progress in fields of health and welfare, and economic victory over our ancient enemies of boom and bust and all the forces that bring them about."

Last night's dinners were vastly different affairs from those of just a year ago. Then the Democratic Party was split from top to bottom. Henry Wallace had walked out with his left wing, the unreconstructed South had walked out with the right wing, and an empty table at the Mayflower marked the spot where Senator Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina wouldn't sit.

Then President Truman was a man on the defensive, undismayed and defiant, it was true, but almost alone in his cocky assurance of victory. He was far from alone last night; every Democrat who could pack into either hotel was there to be seen, to shout himself hoarse and to congratulate himself

Poison Drink Kills 4 of 7 at 'Smoke' Party

Two Attending Affair On 4th St. Hospitalized; City Combed for Guest

"Smoke"—poison alcohol—drunk at a party Wednesday claimed a fourth life last night, that of Mrs. Ella Mae Davenport, who died at Gallinger Hospital.

Two others who drank at the party were in hospitals as police scoured the city for another, apparently unsuspecting victim.

Meanwhile, police tried to track down the source of the poison, believed to have been wood alcohol, normally used as paint remover, and sold in hardware stores.

An autopsy was performed on the first three who died Wednesday evening and early Thursday at Gallinger Hospital. They were Mrs. Helen Shelton, 56; Mrs. Iona Gant, 45, and Jack Schaffer, 42, all of 1603 4th st. nw., scene of the Wednesday party.

Results of a chemical analysis will not be known for several days, Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy coroner, said.

Two guests who drank at the party were hospitalized but not in critical condition. They are Anna Sharpe, 53, at Gallinger Hospital, and Napoleon Jenkins, 33, at Freedmen's Hospital.

Mrs. Sharpe and Mrs. Davenport, the fourth victim, were treated early yesterday at Gallinger, then released, apparently recovered.

But at about 4 p. m., Mrs. Davenport was returned to the hos-

Miss Strong To Face N. Y. Grand Jury

New York, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Anna Louise Strong, 63, pro-Soviet writer who was kicked out of that country on charges of spying, is scheduled to appear Friday at a special session of the Federal grand jury investigating Communist espionage in the United States.

The Nebraska-born Miss Strong, who has spent most of the past 30 years in Russia and been one of its stanchest boosters, went into seclusion after her arrival early today. It was understood she was questioned by the FBI during the day.

Her only answer to the big "why" of her deportation from the Soviet Union for "espionage" has been that Russia must have interpreted her journalistic activity as a threat to its security.

On her arrival at La Guardia Field, she made not a single critical remark about the Soviet Union although she denied that she had consciously "committed espionage or sabotage against the Soviet state or any other state."

Instead she warned of the catastrophic danger of war and delivered a tirade against the American press for creating "hysteria" against Russia.

She was subpenaed to appear today before the grand jury, succeeding the one which indicted 12 United States Communist leaders and charged Alger Hiss with perjury. Pleading fatigue after the lengthy plane trip from Moscow, she obtained a delay until Friday.

It was learned Miss Strong has engaged Herbert Fabricant as her attorney. He is a partner in a law firm with O. John Rogge, former assistant to the United States Justice Department and now engaged as counsel for Agnes Smedley, another American writer who was sympathetic to the Chinese Communist cause.

Miss Smedley has threatened to sue Gen. Douglas MacArthur for libel concerning an Army Intelligence report linking her with an

338,000 Employes of General Motors Face Pay Cut Under Contract

By The Associated Press

The Labor Department reported last night a fourth straight month's drop in living costs.

The Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics consumers price index declined .3 per cent between mid-December and mid-January. This continued a downtrend from the August-September alltime peak.

The new index for mid-January is 1.2 per cent above a year ago. It is 28.2 per cent over June 1946 when major price controls were abandoned and 73.3 per cent above the August 1939 level.

The drop from the August-September high is 2.1 per cent.

The mid-January index means that 338,000 employes of General Motors Corp., whose wages are pegged by contract to the Government index, will take a 2-cent hourly pay cut. They had obtained a 3-cent pay increase under the contract arrangement when the index was on the rise.

The Labor Department attributed the moderate living cost decline, from December to January, chiefly to lower prices for apparel and house furnishings, although foods declined too.

Southerners Plan Rules Filibuster Opening Monday

In the face of new Administration demands for congressional action on the President's program, the threat of a paralyzing Senate filibuster grew yesterday.

Southern Senators caucused and decided to fire their first round of nonstop oratory when a resolution is called up Monday to tighten Senate debate rules. The resolution would permit a two-thirds majority to limit debate on any subject.

Europe's Recovery Could Speed End of Aid, Says President

Mayhew Declares Marshall Plan Still Vital to British

Lake Success, Feb. 24 (AP).—The No. 3 man in Britain's Foreign Office, Christopher P. Mayhew, said today every scrap of Marshall Plan aid continues to be vital to Britain.

The Undersecretary for Parliamentary Affairs commented after finding himself in the middle of a growing tempest started by his own speech to the United Nations yesterday giving an optimistic picture of Britain's economic recovery.

Mayhew's associates said he had been irked by reports in America that Britain is down and out. They said his speech was meant to counter such rumors.

He said in a statement today that Britain could not have recovered as she has without aid and that the Marshall Plan helps Britain play a better role in European recovery.

Mayhew spoke after President Truman, in response to a question, told his news conference Marshall Plan aid would go on until Europe's recovery is assured.

Senatorial criticism flared in Washington about the speech by

Optimistic Report Before U. N. Stirs Up Capitol Hill

President Truman indicated yesterday that progress of European recovery could end Marshall Plan aid sooner than the scheduled four years.

But he made it emphatically clear that only economic recovery of Europe should be allowed to interfere with the planned course of the assistance program.

Mr. Truman's observation was prompted by a reporter's question which called attention to a statement of British Undersecretary of State Christopher Mayhew that Britain's recovery was nearly complete. The reporter asked if, in view of that statement, "it is wise for this country to continue to pour Marshall Plan dollars into Britain."

The President said he knew no details but was happy to hear Mayhew's report. The Marshall Plan, he added, should be continued until European recovery was assured.

Asked later if he meant to indicate recovery could be assured within the prospective four-year limit, Mr. Truman said that if it took four years, that would be all right. But if the British announce-

Darryl Zanuck, Wife Each Get $174,973 Income Tax Refunds

Movie Producer Darryl F. Zanuck and his wife each got an income tax refund of $174,973 during the fiscal year 1948.

And the Government returned a $35,123,401 overpayment on excess profits taxes to the Curtiss-Wright Corp.

These were the high spots for tax refunds for last year announced yesterday by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The bureau, required by law to report all refunds of $500 or more, informed Congress it had made more than 32 million refunds to corporations and individuals.

The bill added up to a whopping $2,297,542,000, which includes $56,530,924 in interest at the rate of 6 per cent on overpayments.

The report did not say whether the refunds were for taxes paid during the fiscal year 1948 or during previous years. Nor did it say whether the refunds were made in cash or credited against future taxes.

The list included some of the Nation's biggest corporations. It included Hollywood stars, political figures, business executives and literary lights. And it included many ordinary taxpayers.

District firms and individuals were represented and some of the rebates they received were impressive.

The largest tax refund locally was the $41,664 credited to Mrs. Marian A. Judd, vice president of Judd & Detweiler, Inc., the printing establishment. Mrs. Judd lives at 3411 Massachusetts ave.

Truman 'Satisfied' At S.O.B. Reaction

From Washington Daily News

By The Associated Press

President Truman is very well satisfied with the reaction to his use of the term "S. O. B." in a speech Tuesday night, he told his news conference yesterday.

Laughingly, he answered reporters' questions about his use of the derogatory initials. The incident occurred in the course of an impromptu speech by the President defending his military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan. Vaughan has been under attack by Radio Commentator Drew Pearson for accepting a decoration from Argentina.

In his speech at the Army-Navy Country Club, Mr. Truman said no "S. O. B." was going to tell him whom to hire or fire.

A reporter asked what reaction he had received to the remark. Mr. Truman said the reaction was very satisfactory to him.

And, at another point in the conference, the President suggested that Pearson and Argentina's President Juan Peron may have nominated themselves for the Nobel peace prize. He told a questioner they certainly weren't nominated by the United States Government, and he added probably they were nominated by themselves.

The case of the naughty initials got official attention in the House of Representatives.

Representative Hoffman (R., Mich.) told his colleagues he believes that "a man who feels impelled to resort to such language as that used by President Truman is not the kind of man who should hold the office honored by Washington and Lincoln." Hoffman said, however, that he sympathized with the President's feelings toward Pearson.

Representative Cox (D., Ga.) jumped up to praise "the unmistakable candor" of the President's remarks.

There was no mention at the President's news conference of a protest lodged about the term by the Rev. Carl McIntire, president of the International Council of Christian Churches. The minister telegraphed the President yesterday saying that his language was "an offense to Christian people," and asking for an apology.

One reporter handed Mr. Truman a copy of yesterday's Washington News. The front page contained a cartoon of a man fiercely biting a dog. Over it was a two-inch-high caption: "News!"

The President remarked it was a good strong bite, and said he was going to ask Cartoonist Harold Talburt for the original drawing.

Pearson, however, later told an interviewer that "I think Harold Talburt owes that cartoon to me, not to Mr. Truman."

He also commented:

"Mr. Truman apparently read my column regarding Harry Vaughan, but not regarding the Nobel peace prize.

"It so happens that I publicly urged that the prize be given to Oswaldo Aranha of Brazil, former president of the United Nations Assembly, the best friend we have in Latin America."

(A Norwegian dispatch said today that 23 persons and institutions have been proposed for the 1949 Nobel Prize, including Pearson and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. The dispatch said the peace prize committee is made up of the five persons elected by the Norwegian Parliament, but that candidates for the award may be proposed by the governments of nations, members of the Norwegian Nobel Committee, former winners of the prize, certain university professors and several international organizations.)

Employment Drops, But Is Still High

By The Associated Press

There were scattered reports of rising unemployment yesterday but in the over-all picture, employment was till well above the prewar "normal" level.

The Connecticut Labor Department reported the unemployed numbered 58,300 in that State as of mid-February, compared with 25,500 last October. Part of this was seasonal. In New York City, Welfare Commissioner Raymond M. Hilliard said his department is receiving more than 3000 applications for relief each week, as against some 1800 each week last February.

At Woonsocket, R. I., the Sidney Blumenthal Co., textile firm, said 400 workers will go back to work Monday. They were idled by a brief shutdown caused by lack of orders.

Confidence in the business future was indicted in announcements of companies going ahead with huge expansion programs. The Southern Pacific Railroad notified the Interstate Commerce Commission that it's in the market for $23,850,000 worth of new equipment. Brooklyn Union Gas Co. said it will spend $4,500,000 for mains and equipment for natural gas.

Gas, Electrical Strike Threat Confronts N. Y.

Chicago, Feb. 24 (AP).—The Inland Daily Press Association today urged Congress to keep controls over "unhealthy monopoly practices" such as it said the AFL International Typographical Union used in dealing with publishers.

The present draft of the Administration labor bill "by abandoning all effective curbs on monopoly practices of this character would, if enacted, be a disservice to free trade unionism, to individual workers, to employers and to the whole public," the organization added.

Labor Board Assails Union 'Goon Squads'

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A union is responsible for the violence and "goon-squad" tactics of its members on strike, the National Labor Relations Board held yesterday.

The five-man board, in a unanimous decision, ruled that the United Furniture Workers of America (CIO) and Local 309 in Salem, Ind., together with eight officials were responsible for the pickets' violence in a strike in September, 1947.

The strike had been called against the Smith Cabinet Manufacturing Co. of Salem, which makes radio cabinets, and altogether involved some 400 employes.

The board held that the international union and two of its officers, and the local and six of its officers, had committed an unfair practice under the Taft-Hartley Act in permitting the violence to take place. The NLRB ordered the unions and officials to cease such activity and to post notices to that effect.

Among the actions of the strikers condemned by the NLRB were the following:

Carrying of sticks by pickets on the picket line and the piling of bricks for use by pickets;

Blocking of plant entrances by railroad ties, autos, raised gutter plates, and tacks;

Canada Plan Proposed for 'Point 4' Study

A cooperative program for prosperity, launched 20 years ago in the Canadian maritime provinces, was proposed here yesterday among plans for developing the world's backward areas.

Known as the Antigonish Movement, the "self-help" program was instituted by the extension service of St. Francis Xavier University of Antigonish, Nova Scotia.

Today, 100,000 persons participate in the program in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, with 451 credit unions in existence, 210 cooperative stores, 27 cooperative housing projects, plus cooperative hospitals, insurance, medical care, etc.

Msgr. M. M. Coady, director of the extension service, and Dr. H. J. Somers, vice president of the university, outlined the program to staff members of the State Department, in the office of Wilfred Maldenbaum, chief of the division of international and functional intelligence.

Wallace Cambell, codirector of the Washington office of the Cooperative League of the United States, who accompanied the Antigonish leaders, said they urged consideration of the plan in conjunction with studies under way to carry out "Point Four" of President Truman's inaugural program, to help the world's underdeveloped sectors.

Monsignor Coady said the Antigonish Movement features such steps as construction of housing by unskilled workers under direction of a few master carpenters, and general pooling of resources for individual benefit.

Movement leaders say the nondenominational program was a major blow to communism in the maritime provinces, and the movement has spread to Haiti, Jamaica, Australia, and parts of Maine, Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan and North Carolina.

Austin Warns Of World Rift

Montpelier, Vt., Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Warren R. Austin, chief American delegate to the United Nations, today said an attempt to establish world government now would split the world into three blocs—an American-led block, a Soviet-led bloc and a third bloc of nations that wouldn't join.

Austin said the only hope for a world government would be to work slowly through present machinery of the U. N.

Addressing a joint session of the State General Assembly, Austin complained that "some zealous advocates of world government . . . are ridiculing it (the U. N.) and belittling the efforts to carry on the struggle for peace through it."

Austin said those who want world government now are mistaken in assuming that all the world except the small Soviet bloc would join it.

He said such countries as Sweden, India, Iran, Turkey and China, all close neighbors of the Soviet Union, probably would not join.

Wallgren Faces Cain, Denies He Was 'Soft' on Communists

By The Associated Press

Mon C. Wallgren confronted Senator Cain (D., Wash.) in a spirited face-to-face session yesterday and heatedly denied that he was ever "soft" with Communists.

Testifying before the Senate Armed Services Committee, the former Washington State Governor and President Truman's fishing companion charged that Cain is "trying to put me in bed with my enemies."

Cain has been Wallgren's chief opponent in Senate hearings on Mr. Truman's nomination of Wallgren as $14,000-a-year chairman of the National Security Resources Board. Cain has accused the former Governor of being unfit to hold the top-level defense job.

Cain took over the examination of Wallgren after Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) demanded more "facts" and "a little less innuendo" in the testimony against Wallgren.

Cain Promises Evidence

"This committee will examine every piece of evidence with meat in it," Tydings said, "but we are not going on any fishing expedition."

Cain retorted that such testimony would be forthcoming "in due time." During the noon recess, he told reporters: "This thing is just beginning."

Earlier, Senator Knowland (R., Calif.) drew an acknowledgement from Wallgren that he had supported former Representative Hugh De Lacy (D., Wash.) for Congress in 1944. Knowland said De Lacy had been identified as a member of the Communist party in testimony before the Washington State Un-American Activities Committee last year.

But Wallgren said he had never been friendly or closely associated with De Lacy. He said the Democratic Party's slogan in Washington State was "vote a straight Democratic ticket," and commented:

'If De Lacy was a candidate, I indorsed him. I still don't believe he is a Communist.'

Wallgren said he rebuked De Lacy once and told him not to "fool around" after De Lacy made a speech on the House floor about the Russian problem. He said he told De Lacy that was a good way to get into trouble.

De Lacy promised to take his advice, Wallgren said, but several days later was again "blasting away" on the Russian question in the House.

"What are you going to do with a fellow like that?" Wallgren said with a shrug.

Knowland read into the record a letter sent out in June, 1945, under the signature of former Representative Jerry J. O'Connel (D., Mont.), then executive secretary of the Washington State Democratic central committee.

The letter, addressed to county chairman, asked for lists of Democratic lawyers who might be interested in handling State guardianship cases, and of bankers who might welcome deposits of State funds.

Wallgren said O'Connel was the "majordomo of the Wallaceites" in Washington State and "a boil on the neck of the Democratic Party."

He denied ever having seen the letter before it was sent out and said he never approved any favors. He said he had had O'Connel fired from his post.

Argentina to Resume Gas Ration in 2 Areas

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Car owners were directed today to register their vehicles for an early resumption of gasoline rationing in the Buenos Aires and La Plata areas.

Rationing was suspended last August "on a temporary basis."

Loan Reported Sought Here By Argentina

By Mac R. Johnson
NYHT News Service

Argentina, finally recognizing that she must have quickly a half billion dollars to save her economy, has asked American friends to begin spade work for a loan, it was learned yesterday.

There have been periodic reports for more than a year that Argentina was seeking a United States loan, but they were always denied by the Buenos Aires government, usually by Miguel Miranda, former economic czar.

This time there is no doubt about Argentina's sincerity in seeking a loan as the only means of paying her debts and re-establishing the nation's credit. As evidence of good faith, Argentina has pledged a change in economic policies that will place her products on the market at, or even below, international prices.

Argentina hopes to get $150,000,000 from New York banks and $350,000,000 from the Export-Import Bank. Repayment would be made through increased exports to the United States and dollar sales through the economic cooperation administration.

Rebels Parry Burma Troops Near Rangoon

Rangoon, Burma, Feb. 24 (AP).—Heavy fighting took place today in the railyards at Insein, 10 miles north of Rangoon.

The Karens, tribesmen fighting to set up an independent state, continued to parry government attempts to land a knockout blow.

Government forces reported they killed 50 Communists near the rice-exporting town of Bassein, 70 miles west of Rangoon. The Communist uprising and the Karen revolt apparently are not related.

Oslo Urged to Join Pact Talks at Start

Oslo, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Foreign Minister Halvard M. Lange told Parliament today that Norway should join in the Atlantic Pact discussions early enough so that Norway can present its views on how such a regional treaty should be formed.

"It should be superfluous to add," he said, "that we do not thereby bind our country to join the treaty. We will face the decision whether we ought to do so only at the moment a finished treaty draft is submitted, approved by all the governments which have taken part in the preparatory discussions."

Lange also said Norway's answer to Russia's offer of a mutual nonaggression treaty will be submitted "as soon as Parliament during the next week has been able to formulate its attitude to the questions raised in the (Soviet) request."

He dismissed the idea of an all-Scandinavia alliance (Norway, Sweden and Denmark) as "no longer a practical possibility."

The governing Norwegian Labor Party already has indorsed the idea of Norway's throwing in her lot with the western democracies, despite two notes from Russia that such a move would not be well received at the Kremlin. Qualified observers felt certain Norway would reject the Soviet treaty offer.

Lange emphasized in his speech today that it will be up to Parliament to "take" the final decision if and when the government presents a finished treaty for ratification" after joining the Atlantic Pact talks. His address will be followed by several days of foreign affairs debate.

"We have never taken part in and will never be a party to any policy with aggressive aims," Lange said. "We have always lived and want to continue to live in peace and good understanding with all neighboring countries. We must always be prepared to do our part to secure peace and therby our own security.

A Slovene State

Tito Offers Compromise On Austria

London, Feb. 24 (AP).—Yugoslavia asked the Big Four today to set up a self-governing Slovene province in southern Austria as a compromise move to break the Austrian treaty deadlock.

A Yugoslav spokesman hinted that Premier Marshal Tito's government would cut its territorial and reparations demands on Austria if some 80,000 Austrian Slovenes are granted autonomy.

The compromise proposal was presented by Yugoslav Deputy Foreign Minister Ales Bebler to deputy foreign ministers of the United States, Britain, France and Russia, who have been deadlocked more than two years in trying to write an Austrian independence treaty.

The long-standing Yugoslav claim for 800 square miles of southern Austria and 150 million dollars in reparations has been the main stumbling block to East-West agreement.

Russia has supported the claims, despite the Cominform fight with Tito.

Reds Reported Near Norway

Helsinki, Finland, Feb. 24 (AP).—A well-informed Finnish source said tonight Russia has strengthened her garrisons along the Soviet-Norwegian border.

The informant said Soviet troops came from the Murmansk area. (There have been no previous reports of Russian movements in this area.)

The informant said there was no indication of any similar troop movements against the Finnish border.

In addition to the common frontier of 122 miles that Norway has with Russia there is another 450 miles with Finland, which is now in a tight Soviet military grip.

The famous North Cape—the region adjacent to the Norway-Russian frontier—is reported a military pushover which a battalion of Soviet troops could seize at any time the Kremlin ordered.

French Reds Condemned in Assembly Vote

Paris (Friday) Feb. 25 (AP).—The National Assembly today voted condemnation of French Communist leaders for alleged treasonable statements and expressed confidence in the government to punish them.

The vote, 386 to 182, climaxed lengthy debate in the lower house of Parliament. During the talks, Premier Henri Queuille threatened to take legal action against the Communist leaders for attempts to "undermine the morale of the nation and the army."

The voting would seem to support the Premier if he seeks legal action against the Communists for statements interpreted by many deputies as treasonable appeals to the French people to welcome the Red army if Russia should invade France.

But the Assembly turned down a motion calling on the government to prosecute Maurice Thorez, secretary general of the Communist Party, on specific charges of treason or incitement to treason.

That motion was introduced by supporters of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, who oppose both the Communists and Queuille's coalition government.

The Assembly adjourned without taking action on a Communist motion that did not back off from statements of Thorez that caused the Assembly to schedule debate in the first place.

This motion asked for an end to the "policy of war preparation based on an alilance with the Nazis of western Germany." It cited a need for "ending the alienation of national independence, abandoned by the French government to American imperialists." It said the Communists found it necessary to "denounce military alliances which make France a base of war operations against our ally, the Soviet Union."

Thorez hit out at the United States during the debate and voiced defense of Russian foreign policy.

Said Queuille in his speech:

"No one has the right to attempt to undermine the morale of the army. We are decided to apply the law in all its force.

"The reflex of the Frenchman is not to ask what he will do if a foreign army occupies Paris; it is to resolve he will prevent it from reaching Paris."

Thorez had been called upon in Parliament to explain recent statements that Russia would never attack anyone and that if the Red army occupied France it would be to chase out an aggressor—America—and therefore the French would welcome the Russians.

He made no direct response, but said United States leaders seek war with Russia.

Bulgars Show 'Guilt Pleas' Of Churchmen

Sofia, Feb. 24 (AP).—The Bulgarian Justice Ministry made public tonight voluminous documents represented as mass pleas of guilt and repentance by 15 Protestant churchmen going on trial Friday on charges of spying for the United States and Britain.

Ilia Timev, Deputy Minister of Justice, showed newsmen three volumes of files of the pretrial investigations with hundreds of pages in the handwriting, he said, of the defendants.

The government announced previously that all had "fully confessed."

The files also contained depositions of witnesses and documents gathered in the official investigation which always precedes a trial in central and eastern European courts.

The prisoners, in jail for weeks, are charged with treason, espionage and violating currency laws. They are accused of having espionage ties with American and British clergymen and welfare workers as well as with foreign diplomats.

The 15 are scheduled to go on trial in a high-ceilinged marble room of the Sofia District Court at 8:30 a. m. (1:30 a. m. EST) Friday. The court seats 300.

Priority in seating is being given to wives, children and parents of the defendants.

Timev said tickets for American and British observers were delivered today.

Spy Trial of 5 Bogs Down on Technicality

Munich, Germany, Feb. 24 (AP).—The spy trial of five Europeans bogged down today on a legal technicality. A recess was ordered after purported confessions of all five were introduced.

Trial of the five, accused of getting United States military information for a foreign power, was nearly at an end.

Defense counsel moved for acquittal on the ground that documents presented in evidence had not been correctly linked to each of the accused.

Brig. Gen. John L. McKee, chairman of the American military commission hearing the case, deferred ruling. He ordered the prosecution to produce expert testimony which would definitely connect each of the defendants with evidence presented. The prosecution was given four days to meet the request.

Evidence in question included maps, sketches and notes allegedly carried in a handbag by defendant Theodore Szendielorz at the time of his arrest last September 15. The prosecution charges the material was collected by the four co-defendants and turned over to him.

The commission held that confessions purportedly signed by each of the defendants did not tie them up directly with other evidence.

Mindszenty Aides Face Trial

Budapest, Hungary, Feb. 24 (AP).—Fourteen alleged accomplices of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty charged with speculation in foreign currency will go on trial before a "workers court" Monday.

The Hungarian government yesterday indicted 3 priests, 10 bankers and brokers and Dr. Gabor Horvath, secretary to Duke Paul Esterhazy. The duke was convicted at the same time as the Catholic prelate.

The indictment, released today, charged the cardinal's treasurer, Msgr. Imre Boka, "speculated illegally" and "smuggled out without the permission of Hungary's National Bank" various amounts of dollars.

The indictment also alleged a "secret system between different convents, including the American and Hungarian Sacred Heart" helped in the black market currency dealings.

The government charged that "these crimes are in organic connection with the significant political conspiracy, the defendants of which were sentenced recently by the people's court."

China Policy Is Outlined To 30 in House

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson yesterday outlined this Nation's "watchful waiting" policy on China to about 30 apprehensive Republican members of the House.

After the closed door conference on Capitol Hill, while several GOP members termed the briefing "very frank," and "very interesting," many said the session only bore out their fears that the United States is committed to "do nothing" to check Communist advances in China.

Acheson, who despite a bad cold that caused him to cancel most appointments the past few days, reviewed developments in China since pre-World War I days in an hour and a half talk culminating in a barrage of questions.

Several Congressmen said the session ended in a sharp exchange between the Secretary of State and Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.), a leading exponent of aid for the Chinese nationalist government.

Most of those present were among 51 Republican Congressmen who asked President Truman, in a statement sent to the White House 10 days ago, to appoint immediately a special military, economic and political commission to reexamine our China policy.

President Truman turned this statement over to Secretary Acheson, and the acting chairman for yesterday's conference was Representative Robert Hale (R., Me.) a sponsor of the congressional move.

Acheson told the Republican Representatives that we must wait for the "dust to settle" before deciding our next move in China, inasmuch as Nationalist Leader Chiang Kai-shek has been forced out of an official role in the government and peace moves are underway.

It has been indicated in recent weeks that the State Department feels that to do otherwise would jeopardize future American relations by thrusting the now successful Chinese Communist armies far into the arms of Russia, while reducing hope of coalition government in China. With the same view goes the attitude that the Nationalist Government is too far gone to revive.

Acheson declined any comment to reporters after yesterday's meeting. Representative Hale said later:

"Nothing the Secretary of State can say to us or to anyone can alter the fact that the Communists are overrunning China. As long as this situation exists I don't see how Americans can fail to be very profoundly disturbed."

Representative Judd, like Hale, declined to say what was discussed at the conference, but said later that while the meeting was of "great value to some members of Congress, he (Ach) said nothing that wasn't available to the members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Judd termed the position of the Chinese Nationalist forces "an unadulterated calamity for the United States." He said, "We have never tried to win the war in China—we have tried to end it." The main reason the Nationalist forces are "in trouble," he said, "is because they followed our advice."

"Deciding to do nothing, leads to a fatal outcome," said Judd. "It's like a doctor waiting to decide how bad a patient's cancer is before operating—then finding the patient dead."

When the State Department says the Chinese Nationalist armies have "lost the will to fight," said Judd, "they ignore the fact that China was fighting two enemies before their strength weakened—the Communists and the Japanese.

"If we won't help them, why string them along? Tell them, in decency, if we'll help them or not. . . . If not, we may soon face two Communist votes among the five permanent members of the United Nation's Security County—Russia and China."

On Meeting Place

Legislature Of China Is Divided

Nanking, Feb. 24 (AP).—China's national legislature split sharply today along the same line that divides the executive branch.

The issue is whether the Legislative Yuan shall meet next week in Nanking or in Canton. Neither side so far has mustered a quorum.

The Nanking faction backs Acting President Li Tsung-jen. The Canton bloc supports Premier Sun Fo, who split with Li when he took his cabinet off to Canton.

Vice Premier Wu Te-chen flew here today from Canton but his stay is temporary. He denied there was any split between Sun and Li. However, he is said to be quietly working to get the legislators to meet in Canton.

Wu is waiting for Li to come to Nanking and sign the new financial measures approved yesterday by the cabinet.

Pearl Buck Says War Lords May Follow Reds in China

Pearl Buck, author of "Good Earth," last night predicted that China would return to the "war lord status of government," if communism failed to provide individual security for the Chinese.

She expressed her belief in an interview preceding a dinner address at a meeting of the Washington Chapter, East-West Association, held in Frazier Hall at Howard University.

"I don't think the Chinese will give communism more than a few years' trial," she explained. "If the system doesn't produce the same individual security as the guild, tong or family system did for centuries, it is doomed in China."

"The peoples of Asia don't know how to function without individual security, provided by the old family system, which is breaking down under the impact of western civilization," asserted Miss Buck.

She pointed out that in the transition period—from family to industrial modes of living in Asia—no provisions had been made for the older ones. For example, there are no "poor homes" to take them in and they flounder around seeking security. That's one reason why the Asiatics are ripe for communistic propaganda, she added.

"Democracy should be more positive in its efforts to show the Asiatics how to organize for the security of the individual," concluded Miss Buck. "So far information or propaganda efforts in that direction are nil or ineffectual."

Acheson's Cold Holds Up Pact Meeting

Secretary of State Dean Acheson, suffering from a bad cold, yesterday postponed until today a meeting on the North Atlantic defense pact.

Europe's Recovery Could End U. S. Aid

ment proved to be correct, he said, the job might not take that long.

The President's statement at his news conference brought a quick response from Mayhew at Lake Success, N. Y., that Marshall Plan aid was still "an absolutely vital element in Britain's economic stability and advancement." The British diplomat's original remark about his country's progress was made Wednesday before the United Nations Economic and Social Council.

Repercussions in Congress

"We could not have got where we are without Marshall Plan aid," Mayhew told an Associated Press reporter yesterday. "Every scrap of Marshall aid we get enables us to play a more effective part in the work of European recovery and the development of closer political relations in western Europe."

Mayhew's optimistic report also had repercussions in Congress, where some Senators felt it might result in a cut in funds for aid to Britain.

Senator Smith (R., N. J.), a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the report suggested the possibility of shifting Marshall Plan aid emphasis to some of the other European countries. Britain now gets about half of the economic assistance funds.

Senator McClellan (D., Ark.) said the Appropriation Committee of which he is a member is certain to look into the British situation to learn whether some cuts can be made.

O'Mahoney Airs Views

However, Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) said it would be a mistake to assume that Congress can abandon the Marshall Plan "until there are concrete assurances that economic recovery has been attained throughout western Europe."

Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) said the Foreign Relations Committee did not discuss the British situation at a meeting this morning on the $5,580,000,000 recovery program proposed for the next 15 months.

Connally added that he wants to know whether Mayhew's statement was backed by his government.

"It's a question of whether the statement was authorized," Connally said. "He was making a political speech, I assume. He was offering recovery as an argument for nationalization."

In a separate interview, Senator O'Mahoney also said that increased spending for national defense and foreign aid "constitutes the only real danger" there will be a Federal budget deficit.

Tax Increase Urged

The only way to meet that is to increase taxes four billion dollars as President Truman has asked, O'Mahoney said. He talked to reporters after a 90-minute meeting of the Senate-House Economic Committee which he heads.

The committee met to start charting its report on Mr. Truman's economic program. Among other things, it calls for standby authority to restore price and wage controls on a limited basis.

The report is due next Tuesday and O'Mahoney said the committee certainly will meet the deadline.

Today's meeting was a noisy one. Reporters waiting outside the locked door heard angry debate. One unidentified committee member shouted:

"I am getting damn sick and tired of doing everything for foreign countries. I want something done for this country for a change."

Briton's Optimistic U. N. Talk Stirs Tempest on Further Aid

Mayhew yesterday on the world economic situation in the U. N. Economic and Social Council.

Some Senators told newsmen the optimistic picture painted by Mayhew might bring a cut in aid funds to Britain.

Mayhew stuck to his guns. British associates said he had not intended to criticize the Marshall Plan or imply that Britain did not need it any more.

Semeon K. Tsarapkin, Soviet delegate, jumped into the controversy here with a blast on the Marshall Plan.

Tsarapkin told the council the policy of the United States is an obstacle to economic development to the world, particularly in countries "placed in a position of economic dependency on the United States."

Mayhew started the ball rolling yesterday when he told the council Britain has completed her economic recovery. He said Britain repudiates prewar economic and social standards and is turning major efforts to "new social and economic experiments."

Mayhew also said the British have not the slightest intention of modifying their economic, social or political plans if that should be necessary to qualify for Marshall Plan aid. A British source explained this sentence was meant as a reply to Russian charges that the Marshall Plan is enslaving Britain.

Informed of Mr. Truman's comment, Mayhew said:

"We could not have got where we are without Marshall Plan aid. Every scrap of Marshall aid we get enables us to play a more effective part in the work of European recovery and the development of closer political relations in western Europe.

"It (Marshall Plan aid) continues to be an absolutely vital element in Britain's economic stability and advancement."

Mayhew said there are two points in his speech that needed greater emphasis. He listed one as a statement that Britain still has a "disturbing dollar deficit" and the other as referring to the contribution the Marshall Plan has made toward Britain's recovery.

Lebanon Prepares For Peace Talks

Rhodes, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—The armistice signed today between Israel and Egypt may be followed next week by simultaneous Israeli talks with Lebanon and Trans-Jordan and is viewed as the first definite step toward a permanent peace agreement for all Palestine, reliable sources said today.

Lebanese officials reportedly have informed Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, who negotiated the Israeli-Egyptian agreement, that they would like to come to Rhodes "soon." Talks between Israel and Trans-Jordan are scheduled to begin Monday.

Under the historic agreement signed at 10:30 a. m. (3:30 a. m. EST) today, Israel will retain virtually all the disputed Negev Desert territory of southern Palestine. Egypt retains Gaza and a slim coastal area about 5 miles wide.

Bunche to Tour Negev

Bunche said he would leave immediately for a two-day tour of the Negev to supervise implementation of the armistice and to study general conditions. He said he would pay particular attention to Beersheba, key Negev town which delayed the present agreement. Beersheba, which is now held by Israel, simply was not mentioned in the armistice agreement, but it is expected to play an important role in the forthcoming talks between Israel and Trans-Jordan.

The armistice was purely military in character and this was emphasized today in dispatches from Cairo. An official Egyptian communique said: "This agreement has no political character. It dealt with purely military questions and absolutely did not touch the political future of Palestine."

Nevertheless, U. N. sources believed it would provide an effective wedge for breaking through to a complete peace settlement.

Saudi Arabia and Iraq have announced they will adhere to agreements signed by the other Arab states. Negotiations with Syria will follow talks with Trans-Jordan.

Mark Ethridge, American member of the three-nation U. N. Conciliation Commission, said in Tel Aviv that the agreement "considerably facilitates our work."

[In Washington, President Truman told his news conference he was "immensely gratified" at the armistice and congratulated Dr. Bunche for his part in the settlement.]

Israel Makes New Bid For U. N. Membership

Lake Success, Feb. 24.—Israel made a new bid tonight for membership in the United Nations.

Israeli spokesmen said their country expected to be admitted soon since Israel has been recognized now by 39 members, or more than a two-thirds majority of the 58 United Nations.

Israel's previous bid failed in the Security Council last December 17.

Law or Not, Oil Heat Produces No Cinders

Oil Firm Licensed To Export Pipe

After a year's delay due mainly to domestic steel shortages, the Government yesterday gave the Trans-Arabian Pipeline a go-ahead signal for its proposed oil line from the Persian Gulf to the Mediterranean.

Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer announced approval of an export license for 25,000 tons of 30-inch steel pipe. This is the first such license since last April, when licensing was suspended on the announced grounds of "disturbed conditions in the Near East."

Trans-Arabia, owned jointly by Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard of California, Socony-Vacuum and Texas Oil companies, has been trying to get the steel pipe since September, 1947. Altogether, with yesterday's allotment, it has got about 79,000 of the 260,000 tons needed.

In return for the license, Trans-Arabia has agreed to bring oil for the United States Navy over its pipeline at cost for 10 years—a saving over transportation by tanker of about two million dollars a year, Sawyer estimated.

Although Sawyer emphasized that yesterday's permit did not guarantee further export licenses would follow until the entire amount was shipped, he remarked that "there is no sense starting and not finishing it."

He also declared the license would not disturb the economy at home. Trans-Arabian Pipeline has the pipe in storage in California ready to ship, he said. It is of a pattern not in demand in this country. The Commerce Secretary also commented that "steel supplies (in this country) are easing up to a certain extent."

The Navy gets most of its oil needed in the Near East from Trans-Arabia now, Sawyer said. "Comparatively small amounts" are being shipped to this country, while the rest goes to Europe. The output of Trans-Arabia is about 500,000 barrels a month.

The low-cost transportation promised the Navy under the agreement will not be given to the Economic Cooperation Administration for shipments to Europe under the Marshall Plan, Sawyer said.

In September, 1947, Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) protested to the Commerce Department that pipe shipments to Trans-Arabia were "playing havoc with steel supplies for domestic users." As a result, former Secretary W. Averell Harriman agreed to notify the Senate Small Business Committee, then headed by Wherry, when any export permits were granted.

Yesterday Sawyer said such notice had been sent to Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) of the Senate Banking Committee.

"The Small Business Committee is out of existence, you know," he told newsmen.

alleged Soviet prewar spy network in the Far East.

On her arrival at La Guardia, Miss Strong indirectly defended the Soviet action in deporting her. She said she was working energetically as a newspaperwoman and that a nation, trying to portect itself and angry about the attitude of the American press, must have considered her activities to be detrimental to their interests.

A remark to the stewardess aboard her plane indicated she may have fallen out with the Communist regime because of over-friendliness toward Red leaders in China.

"You see I had a little trouble with the Russian government" the stewardess quoted Miss Strong. "I wanted to go to China through Siberia and they didn't want the road open. It wasn't open and I didn't know it."

Safety Measures Worth Outlay, AEC Feels

By the United Press

General Manager Carroll L. Wilson said yesterday the United States Atomic Energy Commission has spent "a lot of money" on safety precautions at its far-flung plants "but it was well worth it."

He told the joint congressional atomic energy committee the commisison's plants have "the most impressive safety record attained in any industry."

Representative Chet Holifield (D., Calif.), a member of the committee, meanwhile accused the armed forces of suppressing information on the damage suffered by a naval fleet in the atomic bomb tests at Bikini in 1946.

He said the whole story of Bikini, if made public, "will help to prevent another war," and urged a congressional investigation unless the military releases a report "within a reasonable time."

Talks Scheduled Here Today On Release of Bikini Report

By Peter Kihss
NYHT News Service

New York, Feb. 24.—Secretary of Defense James V. Forrestal has arranged for new talks in Washington Friday afternoon on the issue of making public the long-suppressed official report on the Bikini atomic bomb tests of July, 1946, it was disclosed here today.

The talks were requested by a group of top business leaders and atomic scientists, headed by W. T. Holliday, president of the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, as chairman.

Others in the group were Dr. Harold C. Urey, Nobel prize chemist, and Dr. Harrison Brown, physicist, both of the University of Chicago's Institute for Nuclear Studies; Dr. David Bradley, of the University of California, author of the book "No Place to Hide" on his experience as a radiological monitor at Bikini; and William S. Newell, president of the Bath Iron Works, of Bath, Me.

Secretary Forrestal designated Dr. Karl O. Compton to represent him in the talks, to take place at 3 p. m. Friday in the Pentagon Building. Dr. Compton is chairman of the National Military Establishment's Research and Development Board and himself headed the joint chiefs of staff evaluation board that drew up the Bikini report. The group has asked Secretary Forrestal himself to attend as well.

[A spokesman for Secretary Forrestal said last night that a group of scientists, headed by Dr. Urey, had requested the meeting with the Secretary without specifying what it was intended to discuss. Forrestal then designated Dr. Compton to represent him.—Editor's note.]

The Bikini report was drawn up by a seven-member board, which had been set up to pass judgment on the uses and potential powers of atomic weapons in war and to make recommendations. One member, Dr. Bradley Dewey, former wartime rubber director and now president of the Dewey and Almy Chemical Co. of Cambridge, Mass., has publicly complained about its suppression.

Sally Says Love Led Her to 'Destiny'

United States troops in North Africa, Miss Gillars said.

The professor's insistence became "a constant source of discord," Miss Gillars testified. "I did not want to be with the U.S.A. Zone (section that broadcast to United States and American soldiers), with all my heart I did not want to go."

But the machinations of the professor were too much for Miss Gillars, she said. Apparently a very important person, accustomed to policy parleys with Von Ribbentrop at Hitler's headquarters, the professor used his influence to have her transferred to his U. S. A. Zone, she testified.

"Did you ever intend to betray the United States?" Laughlin asked.

"Not at any time," Miss Gillars declared, chin outthrust.

"Did you ever intend to adhere to the enemy?"

"Anyone who knows me, knows it isn't true," the witness said. "If we could only have witnesses from Germany who know me . . ."

Here she was cut off by an objection from Prosecutor John M. Kelley, jr., on grounds that the last part was not responsive.

After a series of questions about Miss Gillars' early radio career, Laughlin began delving into her romance with Koischwitz with the flat question:

"Were you in love with Dr. Koischwitz?"

The defendant lowered her eyes for a moment, then with a deep breath: "Mr. Laughlin, it is difficult to discuss personal things on the witness stand . . . It is like discussing religion . . ." Then, pressed for a direct answer, she said: "Of course I loved him."

(Miss Gillars, a former actress, showed a tendency to answer questions in an elaborate, discursive manner, which brought requests from the bench and from Kelley to confine her answers to specific questions.)

"When did you start keeping company with him?" Laughlin queried.

"To keep company seems like a strange expression," the defendant countered. "He just grew into my life."

"When did you first become enamored or fond of him?" Laughlin pursued.

"It is not always easy to draw a line of demarcation between admiration, companionship and love," Miss Gillars said as though delivering a classroom lecture, 'especially under the circumstances we found ourselves at that time."

"You've heard of a man and a woman . . . sometimes the man says I like you a lot—or so many bushels or something like that," Laughlin explained patiently. Then he asked: "Can you tell us?"

Kelley objected that the question was leading and Judge Edward M. Curran turned to Laughlin saying: "I don't know what the question is yet."

"When did he first speak words of love to you?" Laughlin pursued.

"Mr. Laughlin," replied Miss Gillars, "I don't think it necessary to go into all of this . . . There is such a thing as a person waiting all his life for another one . . ."

Laughlin pressed his questioning and Kelley objected on the grounds that "she has said she didn't want to answer."

But Miss Gillars continued: "The words of love were not spoken. Mr. Kelley, they were written from Silesia."

"When was that?" Judge Curran asked in a matter-of-fact manner.

"In the spring of 1943," the defendant answered him throatily.

Miss Gillars continued to explain that Koischwitz had gone to Silesia, his boyhood home, because: "There was a particular mountain in Silesia which had played a fateful role in his life since childhood.

"Every time he had a special problem he'd go to what he called his 'Mount Olympus' and confer with himself concerning his problem. When he realized, in the spring of 1943, what was happening to him, he reverted back to his boyhood habits at Mount Olympus and brought the answer that God gave him to life."

At another point, Miss Gillars declaimed:

"He loved the mountains with the intensity that a man might love a woman. The German lanscape called him back every year when he was teaching at Hunter College.

"He wrote me many letters about philosophy and life and the influence of the German landscape on his character. It molded his character and he considered character analagous with destiny. He'd return to Germany each year with his children as they came along."

(Koischwitz was married and was the father of three daughters. His wife, according to testimony, was killed in the bombing of a German hospital.)

Kelley arose to interrupt the discourse with the remark that "I don't mind hearing about the Germand landscape but I object to Professor Koischwitz's life story."

"I think you might go into one or two years, but shorten it up," Curran advised Laughlin after the latter had protested he was laying groundwork to show the professor's influence.

It was then that Laughlin began his questioning into the couple's love life.

Her early broadcasts for the United States zone were strictly "telling American women of social life, the opera, concerts following the cultural theme," Miss Gillars said.

"I never read German newspapers because I didn't want to be influenced by Nazi propaganda and so I asked Dr. Koischwitz if he could get me some American magazines," she said, explaining that from them she felt she might get topics of interest to discuss with American women.

"I'd a feeling everything I said was based on American facts," she testified.

She said she never used a script. Sometimes, she said, she used as topics articles by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Col. Robert McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune.

"I'd had various talks with Professor Koischwitz, starting in the spring of 1943, when we were doing "Midge at the Mike." We very often talked about America. I told him I felt my only reason for being was to go to prisoner-of-war camps," the defendant said.

"I told him the only thing that would give me some happiness in the chaos of war was to feel I'd be of some service to the people" of the United States.

After a 6-month period of wire pulling, she said, the professor managed to get authorization for the PW broadcasts which were to be in the form of messages and interviews with imprisoned Yanks to be broadcast to the United States.

Accompanied by Koischwitz and two technicians, Miss Gillars said, she "went from camp to camp. We discussed America and Dr. Koischwitz did a great deal to bring a sort of understanding" between the captors and their prisoners.

She described how they visited a group of GIs in the latter's quarters on an estate where the prisoners had been assigned to work, and how the professor delighted the Yanks by drawing pictures.

She testified under questioning that Koischwitz was anti-British, anti-Roosevelt and anti-Jewish.

The defendant declared she and the professor had often discussed aspects of Soviet aggression and stated: "If Spengler's Decline of the West were in every American home perhaps we could still be saved, even though we have lost China to the Communists."

(Oswald Spengler, deceased German philosopher, warned in a book published shortly before World War I that the civilization of the Western world was in danger of passing.)

Miss Gillars testified she, through Dr. Koischwitz, fought off suggestions from higher-ups that the PW programs should contain propaganda. She then described their first visit to such a camp—one situated near Frankfurt.

"Did you represent yourself as a Red Cross worker?" Laughlin asked.

"I have never at any time told anyone I was with the Red Cross," Miss Gillars replied.

(This was in contradiction to testimony of Government witnesses who had testified she had represented herself as a Red Cross aide in seeking interviews.)

"Did any soldiers protest the interviews?" Laughlin inquired at another point.

"I don't recall any protests . . . As a matter of fact, I know there weren't any."

She said she did not recall ever talking with Eugene McCarthy, former soldier who had previously testified he and other GIs drove Miss Gillars from their prison camp in disgust.

Included in other testimony was the assertion by Miss Gillars that she used the word "kike" only once, that it was at the behest of Robert Best, American traitor now serving a life term for aiding the Nazis, and that she felt "unhappy" about it later.

In one recording attributed to Miss Gillars, the voice identified as hers used the phrase "Roosevelt and his kike boy friends."

The Best incident, however, concerned a different program, Miss Gillars asserted.

After Miss Gillars' 43¼ hours of testimony, the trial was recessed until 9:50 a. m. Monday because of the pressure of other legal business. Two defense witnesses and the defendant are slated to testify then.

Radio Station Admits Some Wrongful Acts

By The Associated Press

G. A. Richards told the Federal Communications Commission yesterday that he wished to "admit the wrongfulness of certain acts" in connection with radio station operation.

Richards' station KMPC at Los Angeles is under investigation on charges of news slanting. He denied knowledge of this. He is controlling stockholder in KMPC and two other major metropolitan stations, WJR at Detroit, and WGAR at Cleveland.

The FCC last year ordered an investigation into charges by the Radio News Club of Hollywood, Calif., that news broadcasts over KMPC had been "slanted" to reflect Richards' point of view. A similar complaint was also filed by the American Jewish Congress, and petitions for a full hearing were received from the National Association of Radio News directors and Americans for Democratic Action.

Although the complaint was confined to the Los Angeles station, the commission said it would also inquire into the handling of news over the Detroit and Cleveland outlets, in view of Richards' control of those stations.

A public hearing before FCC Commissioner E. M. Webster had been ordered to start at Los Angeles on March 16. Richards said in a petition filed yesterday that the hearing would be unnecessary, and that instead he desired to appear personally before the full commission.

"By hearing him in person," the petition of his attorneys said, "the commission will afford the petitioner opportunity to admit the wrongfulness of certain acts and to give the commission satisfactory assurances against a recurrence."

The petition said that Richard had been ill for some time, with the result that he had been "impatient and impulsive."

"He now realizes that some groups have abused his fear of communism to their own ends," the petition said.

FRIED CHICKEN

Prepare a coating mixture of ¾ cup flour, ¾ teaspoon salt, 1½ teaspoon paprika and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Rub flour mixture well into chicken. Set aside any leftover flour for gravy.

Heat enough fat in a heavy skillet to give a depth of about ½ inch. First place meaty pieces of chicken into hot fat, slipping less meaty pieces between. As soon as chicken begins to brown, about 10 minutes, reduce heat, cover, and cook slowly until tender. 35 to 60 minutes, according to size of chicken. Turn occasionally to brown evenly.

HORSE RADISH POT ROAST

Select a three or four pound rump or chuck pot roast. Season with salt and pepper. Brown well on all sides, adding 2 tablespoons of lard to kettle, if necessary. When browned, spread ½ cup prepared horseradish over the meat. Add 1 cup water, cover closely and cook at a simmering temperature about 3½ hours. Turn the pot roast once or twice so that it will cook evenly. Thicken the liquid and add water for gravy. Serves 3 to the pound.

SHOULDER LAMB ROAST

Have a shoulder of lamb boned and rolled. Rub it with 1 tablespoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper and place on rack in uncovered roasting pan. Let roast without water or flour added for approximately 35 minutes per pound, or until meat thermometer registers "well-done" (oven temp. 325° F.). During the last hour baste frequently with the following barbecue sauce:

Melt 2 tablespoons butter, ½ cup currant jelly and 2 tablespoons vinegar together with ½ teaspoon dry mustard. Serve additional barbecue sauce with sliced roast. Serves 3 to the pound of boned meat.

Vandenberg Asks Status Of Ilse Koch Case

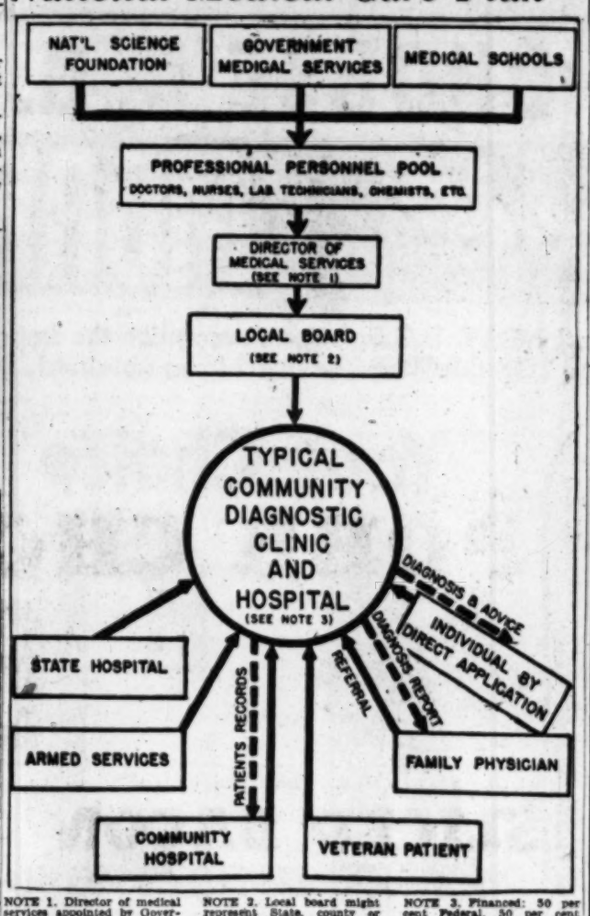
Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) yesterday asked Secretary of the Army Royall whether the case of Ilse Koch and the Buchenwald atrocities could be reopened.

He did so, he told Royall in a letter, on the basis of information volunteered by H. A. Atkins of Detroit.

A veteran of the Canadian air force, Atkins was imprisoned at one time in Buchenwald.

He wrote both Senator Vandenberk and Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) telling of his experience in the concentration camp and complaining about the clemency granted Isle Koch.

National Medical Care Plan



NOTE 1. Director of medical services appointed by Governor; recommended by medical schools or by State Public Health Authority.

NOTE 2. Local board might represent State, county or other local public health officials, the medical profession and lay contributors.

NOTE 3. Financed: 50 per cent Federal, 50 per cent State, local government, lay contributions.

VA Medical Director Urges Semi-Free Diagnostic Clinics

brought into the veterans medical program. He holds high posts in numerous professional medical organizations.

Between the extremes of "do-nothingism" and "bureaucratic" compulsory health insurance, there lies a "democratic solution—a positive middle-way program that is compatible with our social structure and with our Federal system of government, "Dr. Magnuson said.

The plan calls for the establishing, in communities of every State, diagnostic clinics accessible to all the population, equipped with the most modern facilities for complete health examinations, and staffed with the highest-type medical and professional personnel available.

Financial support for the program would come from the Federal Government, the States, local governments, and private contributions.

The clinics would provide free, part-pay, or full-rate medical examinations and health advice to all members of the community who seek the service.

But the clinics would not provide free treatment.

The family physician, local hospital and specialist would provide treatment at their regular rates, supplemented by deficit payments from funds provided by local-State-Federal sources. A local representative board would determine the economic status of the patient for the free, part-rate, or full-rate examination in the clinic, and treatment by the local hospital or physician.

The big problem would be to staff the diagnostic clinic in the face of the national shortage of medical personnel. This problem could be solved, according to Dr. Magnuson.

The medical schools would provide for the staffing by full-time and part-time physicians and associated auxiliary workers. The Veterans Administration could cooperate by encouraging its young resident-doctors to complete their training as specialists in the diagnostic clinics under the supervision of outstanding medical consultants. The proposed National Science Foundation, which would undertake to help educate and train young scientists, would be able to arrange for doctors educated at Federal expense to pay back Uncle Sam by serving in the outlying diagnosic clinics.

"The subsidized medical examinations would substantially reduce medical costs for the moderate income families and make it possible for any income group to get the service now open only to the wealthy," Dr. Magnuson said.

"The patient would be able to obtain a thorough and complete diagnosis, so necessary to really adequate medical and disease prevention, but a course which most patients shy away from because of the expense involved."

But while reducing costs, Dr. Magnuson asserted, the free medical examinations would also raise community health standards by making available diagnostic facilities not readily accessible to the general practitioner; by providing high-type consultation for the general practitioner; by making it possible for the average patient to get proper diagnoses, and therefore, proper treatment, and by providing the family physician opportunity for close contact with the most up-to-date medicine.

Dr. Magnuson said the plan would permit more efficient use of the limited medical manpower of the Nation, and more widespread use of the country's top medical skill and brains.

The armed forces, for example, could utilize the facilities of the diagnostic clinics in those areas where the Army or Navy has no clinic of its own.

The Veterans' Administration could make use of the clinics by sending its non-service-connected cases—who make up two thirds of VA's patients—there for examinations. Under present provisions, those veterans must enter a VA hospital and take up a bed in order to get a complete diagnosis.

The task of staffing the diagnostic clinic would be handled on a cooperative basis involving medical schools, State and local public health agencies, the Veterans' Administration and the proposed National Science Foundation. A State director of medical services, recommended by the universities and appointed by the Governor, would supervise the program in each State.

Gunmen Beat Them, 3 Boys Say

Columbus, Ga., Feb. 24 (AP).—Three teen-aged Negro boys told police today they had been beaten by five armed white men, all curiously interested in Brotherhood Week.

Police of Columbus and nearby Phenix City, Ala., said tonight they were unable to establish a motive for the beatings.

The boys, Robert Ford, 16, Matthew Brown and Ernest Chester, both 17, told police the unmasked white men picked them up at gun point as they left a high school basketball game in Columbus and drove them across the river into Alabama.

There, the three reported, the men questioned them about speeches made at the school concerning Brotherhood Week and the activities in Columbus of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The boys were panicked into flight by pistol shots, after fruitless questioning and being made to disrobe. They were beaten badly with fists, they reported.

Brotherhood Week is celebrated each year under auspices of national church organizations. This year three white men spoke at the high school on brotherhood, but neither Ford nor Chester heard the speeches. They do not attend the Spencer school. Brown, a student there, heard the talks.

on the leader for whom a year ago many had only gloomy pessimism.

The man who stood up in the two crowded banquet halls last night was exactly the same man who had stood there a year ago to promise victory to a lot of people who didn't believe him. It was the crowd itself last night that was different; it was made up of the same men and women, but victory had been thrust upon it by the unpretentious man they had discounted the year before.

Some of them were still out last night, despite the President's impressive victory at the polls. This time they did not announce that they were staying away on a matter of principle; they had business elsewhere and could not get back in time for the dinners.

Among the missing were Senator Johnston and Senators Long and Ellender of Louisiana and Eastland and Stennis of Mississippi. Three Senators from States that seceded from the party last year, but who were at the dinners nevertheless, were Hill and Sparkman of Alabama and Maybank of South Carolina.

President Truman stood before them again last night to repeat what he had preached over and over during his campaign: that "the central issue . . . was the welfare of all the people against the special privilege of the few." In the end, he said, "when we made it clear where the Democratic Party stood on that issue, the people made it clear that they stood with us."

"I am proud to say," Mr. Truman declared, "that never before has the Democratic Party been more firmly dedicated to a program in the interest of all the people. The platform adopted at the Democratic convention in 1948 is clear and forthright.

"Our job now is to enact into law the programs that the people need and deserve.

"That is exactly what we are doing.

"We are meeting determined opposition. The special interests are fighting us just as if they had never heard of November 2. For them, campaigns and elections are just preliminary exhibition matches—the fight in Congress is the main bout.

"The special interests are on the job year in and year out—seven days a week, and 24 hours a day. They work through their lobbies and pressure groups, through the editorial pages and the columnists and commentators they control. They twist and misrepresent the measures the people voted for. They are again trying to frighten the people with the old, worn-out bugaboo that socialism is taking over Washington.

"This one-sided barrage of propaganda seems overwhelming at first. There are no full-page ads on our side. In fact—all we have on our side is the people."

It was then that the President said he might repeat his sweep of the Nation by train "to tell the people how their Government is getting on."

The "special interests," he said, were even now "using every trick they can think of to defeat our labor policy." He described the Taft-Hartley Act as "an insult to the working men and women of this country," who, he declared, "will not rest until it is destroyed."

The same "die-hard reactionaries," he said, who were fighting repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act also were embarked on a "campaign of confusion against all our other measures for the welfare of the people." He said:

"They say they are for extending and improving social security—but they call our proposals a bureaucratic system that will destroy the character of every American.

"They claim to be in favor of housing—but they say our low-rent housing program is a mistake because it does too much for low-income families.

"They make speeches about the American home — but they encourage landlords to lock out their tenants until rent control is repealed.

"They say they are in favor of good wages—but they argue that the minimum wage should be held down to a starvation level."

In spite of them, the President declared, "we will enact the programs to which we are committed."

Before the President spoke, the crowd that jammed the Statler's Presidential room and the hall outside heard a broadcast of Vice President Barkley's speech from San Francisco. He was there to attend a great West Coast Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner.

At the Mayflower, Mr. Truman was preceded by Mrs. George Mesta, in a dinner dress of maroon slipper satin with her famous diamond clasps at the low neckline. She said the dinners celebrated not only the memory of Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson, but the victory of President Truman.

"Harry S. Truman had a vision equal to that of Jefferson," she declared. "He had a determination like that of Jackson, and so he made this a victory dinner."

Mrs. India Edwards, executive director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, spoke at the Statler before the President arrived from the Mayflower. Mr. Truman, she said, captured the hearts of women voters and their minds "with his simple, clear presentation of the benefits of the New Deal and the failure of the Republican Eightieth Congress to extend it." She, as well as Mrs. Mesta, spoke of his devotion to his wife and daughter.

Neither Mrs. Truman nor their daughter, Miss Margaret Truman, attended the dinners last night. Miss Truman is in New York studying voice, and Mrs. Truman was confined to the Blair House with a cold.

Toastmaster at the Mayflower was Wilson Wyatt, former housing administrator, who acted as master of ceremonies during the broadcast from the Statler. During the dinner at the latter hotel, Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois acted as toastmaster.

Entertainment was provided by the Justin Lawrie singers, Metropolitan Tenor Richard Tucker, and the dance team of Lathrop and Lee.

OLD HICKORY WASN'T READY—Mrs. Virginia Clark of 3159 Queens Chapel rd., Mount Rainier, Md., looks at the marble coffin, which, President Truman said in his speech last night, was brought from Syria at great expense by a number of citizens who got it for President Andrew Jackson. Old Hickory, however, wasn't dead and wrote to the group, "I must decline the intended honor." The sarcophagus is outside the Smithsonian Institution. A sign near it reads, "brought to America in 1839 by Commander J. D. Elliott"

Truman Declines To Elaborate on Talk With Young

President Truman yesterday said his conference last Monday with Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young was a broad-gauge proposition concerning District affairs.

The Chief Executive declined to elaborate when asked if he could throw any light on the meeting, which a reporter said he understood was about District affairs.

Mr. Truman said that was exactly what he and Brig. Gen. Young discussed.

D. C. Man Is Held For Trying to Fire Truck and House

Milton J. Proctor, 28, of 2344 Ainger pl. se., yesterday was ordered held under $1000 bond for grand jury action on a charge of attempted arson.

His younger sister, Miss Anna Proctor, told Municipal Court Judge Walter Casey that Wednesday night, while he was drunk, Proctor attempted to burn up his own truck by pouring kerosene around it and putting a match to it.

Then he ran upstairs and threw a burning doll through a window onto the porch roof, she said.

Canadian Minister Stone Transferred to Sweden

Ottawa, Feb. 24 (U.P.)—Canada today appointed its Minister to Washington, Thomas Stone, as the first Canadian Minister to Sweden. External Affairs Minister Lester B. Pearson said the government has not yet decided who will replace Stone in Washington. Stone, 49, has been Minister to Washington since 1946.

eral and of all departments and establishments of the Government.

"The authority to settle all claims for or against the Government would, since it is an executive function, be transferred from the new General Auditing Office to the executive branch."

The commission agreed on recommending that "the practice of sending millions of expenditure vouchers and supporting papers to Washington be stopped as far as possible." It termed this practice by GAO as a "costly system."

"It means carloads of vouchers from all over the United States hauled to Washington for individual examination in GAO."

The commission agreed that some Government practices "come down from Alexander Hamilton," the first Secretary of the Treasury.

"They were archaic when total expenditures of the Government were only 4 billion dollars a year. Now with a Government which expends over 40 billion they are totally inadequate."

It proposed a "new structure . . . intended to tell the Congress and the public two things:

"1. On budgeting: What is the money wanted for?

"2. On accounting: What do the taxpayers get for it?"

It asked for "performance budgets" with more power for the President over the way various agencies spend the funds appropriated.

It pointed out as a horrible example, the National Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, Md. This hospital now receives allotments from 12 different Navy appropriation titles.

"There is no one title in the present budget where the total cost of operating a Navy hospital is shown," it says. Under "performance budgeting" the cost of operating the Bethesda Center, for example, would be shown as an "identifiable program" under one heading.

"In the Bethesda case, under the new system the cost of operating the hospital would have been presented in detail. Congress might readily compare such cost with that of the preceding year or with . . . other comparable hospitals," it declared.

"The present appropriation structure underlying the budget," it called "a patchwork affair evolved over a great many years and following no rational pattern.

"In some areas of the budget there are entirely too many appropriation items; in others, perhaps too few. Some appropriation items are exceedingly broad in scope; others are narrow on account of excessive itemization.

"Appropriations for a particular function appear in different places. In spite of recent simplifications, the language of some appropriation items remain a jungle of detail provisions."

The commission emphasized the extent the "public information" part of the Government has grown in 20 years. In 1947 the total printing bill of the executive branch at the Government Printing Office was $47,500,000 for about 14 billion items.

Twenty years before it was only $10,500,000 for 3.5 billion items.

Clews Fail In Murder Of Mahoney

New Orleans, Feb. 24 (AP).—After nearly a hundred persons had been questioned in the killing of Virginia millionaire James A. Mahoney, Acting Detective Chief John J. Jackson said tonight: "We have absolutely nothing."

He said a cab driver was questioned at length today after a tip but was found to have no connection with the killing.

Two men and a woman picked up on Jackson's orders at the Mobile airport also were cleared. He said the three, one of whom gave a Washington, D. C. address, had aroused suspicion by their hurried departure from here.

Mahoney, 55-year-old bachelor, was the wealthiest man in Bristol, on the Virginia-Tennessee border. He was found dead in a French Quarter hotel room early Tuesday, his head beaten in and his neck broken by a twisted towel.

Athens Slayer May Be Suspect In Polk Killing

Athens, Feb. 24 (U.P.)—An unidentified man who shot and killed a policeman while resisting arrest and later tried to commit suicide was under heavy police guard tonight in an Athens hospital.

Unconfirmed Greek press reports said the man might be Adam Mouzenides, named by Greek authorities as one of the five men who actually took part in the murder last May 19 of George Polk, correspondent for the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Police refused to confirm or deny the report.

Senate Group Favors Kimball for Air Post

Unemployed Youth Parlays a Dime Into 1949 Auto

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 24 (U.P.)—Joseph Barnhart, 19, an unemployed roofer, today told how he parlayed a dime into a 1949 automobile.

At a skating rink Barnhart decided to match his last 10 cents against a dime held by a companion. Barnhart won and quit. He invested the dime he won in a bingo game. He won the first game—a $10 ticket to a buffet dinner.

He went to the party but didn't stay long.

Barnhart discovered when he got home that he had won the grand door prize—a new car.

Arguments End in Helbig Marital Case

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 24 (U.P.)—Pretty Mrs. Patricia Jelm Helbig, a socialite and former national women's skeet champion, today fought her second husband's court action to dissolve her divorce and leave her married to two men.

Mrs. Helbig

Jelm

Helbig

Common Pleas Judge Samuel H. Silbert heard closing arguments in the suit brought against the 28-year-old brunette by Charles R. Jelm, 27, a metallurgist, who wants her back.

Patricia is now married to Jack Helbig, a contractor. Helbig and Jelm were friends and fraternity brothers at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Jelm charged in his suit that Patricia divorced him without his knowledge so she could marry Helbig, her third husband. He told the court Patricia had admitted "intimacies" with his fraternity brother before her divorce from him.

Jelm also charged that Patricia lived with him for six months while her divorce suit was pending and that their fourth child, Melissa, was conceived in that period. Moreover, he added, they continued to live together as man and wife for another six months after the divorce was granted in March, 1948.

In contesting Jelm's action, Patricia told the court he had proposed to her that she live with him in a "purgatory" after the divorce decree. She said Jelm contended she should serve a three-year "sentence" as his wife and live according to the Ten Commandments. For each month of good behavior her term in "purgatory" would be reduced by three months, and after that she would be free to marry anyone she pleased.

Mrs. Helbig testified that the last year of her married life with Jelm was "very happy because I knew I would not have to put up with him much longer."

Bill to End Oyster War Is Proposed

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 24 (AP).—An end to the Potomac River oyster war between Maryland and Virginia is the ambitious hope for a bill proposed today by four Free State senators.

The bill is the result of several conferences between legislators of the two States. When introduced, it will be sponsored by Senators Monroe (R., Charles), Bailey (R., St. Marys), Goldsmith (D., Calvert) and Phoebus (R., Somerset).

The crux of the measure is separation of Potomaac aaRiver Administration from other oyster problems. At present it comes under the fisheries commission of each State.

It would establish a three-man commission, all residents of counties bordering on the Potomac. The Governor of each State would appoint a member and jointly name the third. The President of the United States would appoint the third member if the Governors failed to agree.

The commission would have full authority to administer the compact of March 28, 1785, between the States. It would particularly regulate hand dredging. Power equipment would be prohibited.

The handscraping season would extend from November 15 to February 15. Only watermen already licensed, in the two States would automatically be eligible to continue oystering.

The commission could license more provided they were divided equally between the States. A 5-cent tax on each bushel would finance commission activities. Penalties for violations would be the same as now, up to one year in prison or up to $1000 fine.

The Maryland law would become effective whenever a parallel measure is enacted in Virginia, whose legislators have promised to introduce one in the 1950 session if Maryland passes its own bill.

Yes, It Was a Skunk—He'll Bury His Clothes

Cambridge, Md., Feb. 24 (AP).—Winnie Spear had seen the animal around the house and thought it was a skunk. But he never could get close enough to make sure. Yesterday he got close enough. He'll have to bury his clothes.

Labor Retains London Seat in Key Election; 31st Commons Victory Since It Took Office

London, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Labor retained its House of Commons seat for the drab West London district of South Hammersmith today in a byelection regarded as a strow vote for the next national election.

Laborite Tom Williams polled 15,223 votes against 13,610 for Conservative Anthony Fell. Labor's majority was reduced to 1613 as compared with the 3458 by which it took the seat in the 1945 general election.

With today's victory, Labor has successfully defended 31 Commons seats in byelections since it took office in 1945.

So important was the South Hammersmith election regarded that some Labor leaders have been considering the advisability, if they won it, of calling an early national election instead of waiting until the summer of 1950.

However, Morgan Phillips, secretary of the Labor Party, said tonight in a victory speech that Labor would serve its full term and complete the carrying out of its platform.

Labor won what had long been the safely Conservative seat for South Hammersmith in the 1945 election landslide.

Labor and Conservative leaders from Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee and Winston Churchill down campaigned actively for their men.

International problems were all but ignored. It was a straight Socialist-Tory fight on such domestic questions as the housing shortage, food rationing, high taxation and the cost of living.

Brice Given Confirmation In Maryland

Annapolis, Feb. 24.—Arthur H. Brice of Betterton, Md., member of the Public Service Commission and former State Senator, today was confirmed by the Maryland Senate as Commissioner of Motor Vehicles.

The name of Brice was one of hundreds sent to the Senate by Governor Lane today, last day upon which the nominations could be presented.

Brice, close political ally of Governor Lane, will succeed W. Lee Elgin of Hagerstown, whose ouster through a "ripper" bill was blocked last November by a referendum.

The new commissioner will begin a two-year term May 2. A new law changed the term to coincide with that of the Governor so that the Governor elected in 1950 will be able to name his own choice for a four-year term.

Agriculture Dept. Employe Sues for Former Rating

Burwell B. Powell of Ednor, Md., yesterday asked District Court to order the Agriculture Department to reinstate him to the same position he held when he was discharged in June, 1947.

His suit charged that he held the grade of P-5 agricultural economist when discharged, but that the Agriculture Department, rehiring him in January, 1948, on the advice of the Civil Service Commission, took him back with the grade only of P-3.

Powell's suit also asks for a declaratory judgment granting him the rights he would have accrued if he had not been illegally discharged.

Named defendants in the suit are Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan and T. Roy Reid, director of personnel, and R. Douglas Smith, chief of the division of personnel, production and marketing administration, Department of Agriculture.

TRY A DELICIOUS ROASTED FRESH HAM

SERVE WITH APPLE SAUCE SPINACH

Fresh whole or half ham
Salt and pepper
1 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon mustard
Whole cloves

Lay the ham fat side up on a rack in an open roasting pan. Sprinkle cut surface with salt and pepper. Make incision and insert meat thermometer so that center of bulb reaches center of fleshiest part. (Bulb should not rest on fat or bone.) Place ham, uncovered, in moderate oven (350° F.) and roast until done. It will be done when thermometer registers 185° F. Allow about 30 min. per pound for roasting. When almost done, remove from oven, and take off rind (if not already removed). Score fat in diagonal lines, stick with whole cloves, rub surface with brown sugar-mustard mixture. Return to oven to finish roasting and to brown. Serves 3 to the pound.

Women's Aid Seen County Party's Need

The solution to Democratic problems in Maryland and Montgomery Counties is greater representation of women in party councils, diners at a Montgomery County Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner were told last night.

The advice was offered by William Neale Roache, assistant treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, who made a flying trip from a Washington Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner to address the county group.

Roache is the son of Mrs. Anna H. Roache, president of the Montgomery County Women's Democratic Club, which sponsored a $2-a-plate dinner at the Stone House Inn, Silver Spring.

He emphasized that men should not overlook the strength of women in campaigning and getting votes and deplored the lack of organization within the party in the State and county in the last campaign.

"Campaigns are won in the precincts," said Roache, who began serving the Democratic National Committee 13 years ago as a messenger boy.

He said Democratic women in the Maryland's Sixth District, which includes Montgomery County, would elect a Democrat to Congress in the next election and help send a Democratic President to the White House in 1952.

J. Bond Smith, chairman of the County State Democratic Central Committee, urged cooperation to restore the county to "its rightful place once again in the Old Free State."

Unlike most Jefferson-Jackson Day dinners, the one held in Silver Spring was not to raise funds, but rather to gather Democrats together. Through the means of a life-size television set, the 150 persons attending the dinner saw and heard President Truman deliver his address at the Democratic dinner at the Hotel Statler.

A poetic tribute to Maryland women of her own composition was read by Mrs. E. L. Pugh, a charter member of the sponsoring club.

D. C. Teachers Held Among Poorest Paid

Washington is near the end of the scale in the average salary it pays teachers as compared with other major cities, Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning said yesterday.

He told a group of parents, who met at Taft Junior High School to celebrate the fifty-second anniversary of the founding of the Parent-Teacher Association, that Washington now stands eighteenth in a list of the Nation's 20 largest cities in average pay for teachers.

The $330 proposed raise will bring Washington to tenth position, Dr. Corning said.

The school head listed five phases of the education program that he hopes to see improved. He called on the parents for their support and guidance.

They are: More visual-aid facilities, a guidance program for elementary grades, improved libraries for elementary and junior high schools, more emphasis on the arts, and extended field trips to take advantage of of Washington's "educational environment."

Dr. Corning also said school officials are studying the possibility of ending mid-year promotions and graduations.

Divisional directors of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers participated in a candlelighting ceremony marking the anniversary.

Insurance Firm Owner Faces Court in $15,000 Bank Fraud

William C. Strasser, 40, a Washington insurance firm owner, yesterday pleaded nolo contendere to an information charging him with embezzling $15,855 from a Damascus, Md., bank.

He was placed on personal bond and his case was referred to the probation office for presentencing investigation by District Court Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut, after Assistant United States Attorney Oliver Dribble explained that full restitution had been made. The information was issued by the United States attorney's office.

Strasser, who owns and operates an insurance company at 2100 14th st. nw., was arrested last October 14 by FBI agents in the office of his attorney, Alvin Newmyer.

An FBI spokesman said at the time that Strasser's insurance firm handled personal and auto loans for the Damascus Bank, of which he was vice president and director. Funds collected on these loans were deposited to an account under the insurance company's name in the National Capital Bank of Washington, he said.

The funds, however, were insured as the property of the Damascus Bank under the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., a Government agency, according to the spokesman.

Yesterday it was learned that Strasser periodically transferred the funds by check from the Washington bank to the Damascus bank, but that two of the three checks he presented to the Damascus bank in September and October of last year came back marked "insufficient funds."

Ex-Cop Shaves Loss in Theft To Aid Police

A former policeman originally reported his loss in a safe robbery as amounting to $10,000 while the actual loss was $68,000—to facilitate police investigation, it was said yesterday.

The victim was Richard H. Beckley, a retired detective sergeant, formerly of the homicide squad, who now operates a poolroom.

He told police he returned to his home, 1800 New Jersey ave. nw., early January 23, and surprised three men removing the safe. He was held at gunpoint, he said, until the men loaded the safe in an automobile, then sped away.

Beckley said the loss amounted to $10,000, chiefly because he didn't want to discourage spending of the loot by the thieves, Detective Sergt. Irving Lubore said. Lubore teamed with Detective Sergts. Samuel R. Russell and Richard Meissner to track down the suspects.

Beckley also wanted to keep the amount of the haul "quiet" because he didn't want it generally known he kept as much as $68,000 in cash and jeweyry at his home, Lubore said.

The stolen safe had been in Beckley's house for 40 years, Lubore said he had been told.

The money represented the lifetime savings of the 69-year-old victim, Lubore said he understood.

Stance W. James, 30-year-old shoemaker, and his brother, Oliver James, 35-year-old waiter, were arrested Sunday by the detectives and charged with burglary. Their case has been continued until March 10.

A third defendant, Lewis Singleton, surrendered Wednesday

Horowitz Stands Apart As Pianist

By Paul Hume

You could not ask for more beautiful piano playing than Vladimir Horowitz's last night in Constitution Hall. And if you were so ungrateful as to ask, you would not get it.

It was a night when Horowitz played old and new music. And he played it lovingly, treating the piano with all the affection of his being.

It centered around a wondrous reading of Beethoven's seventh sonata, a tour de force from Scriabin, the poetry of Chopin's A-Flat Ballade, and two pieces by Liszt. The early Beethoven was set forth along broad lines. Only in certain dynamic excesses in the moody slow movement did the music seem a bit pressed. The minuet and final rondo were absolutely right.

Alexander Scriabin was quite the rage two decades ago. The finest works from his pen are those for piano. Horowitz played an early poem, reminiscent of Debussy, with ravishing effect. But his pronouncement of the "Versla flame" had an iridescent ecrotism unlike other piano music. Few musicians today can create so valid an esthetic effect in this music. Only Horowitz could build the long line to its overwhelming climax.

It was equally astonishing to hear him revive the scented measures of Chopin's most lyrical ballade. His tone, whose tenderness had been a glory all evening, was here at its most resplendent. Moving into Liszt's Petrarch Sonnet and the touching Forgotten Waltz, Horowitz took away what little reserve some of his listeners had managed to retain. It was reassuring to hear a titan of the piano playing so gently.

The piano was the dominant instrument of the nineteenth century, and Vladimir Horowitz knows every secret of its music.

His program, one of the finest he has ever assembled, took him well into our own time as well. Six preludes of Dmitri Kabalevsky call Shostakovich to mind. Their system is a bit simpler than the older Dmitri generally used. They range the whole piano technique and found their master in the artist of the evening.

If we have neglected to praise Mendelssohn's Songs without Words, the Chopin Mazurkas, and the closing Rakoczy March, it is only for reasons of space. And space was as tight last night, with the stage packed to the edges, as it is in this column. Four encores culminated in the Stars and Stripes Forever. It was in every way a memorable concert.

Citizens Block Liquor Permit At Suitland

An off-sale beer, wine and liquor license application for a Suitland, Md., establishment was rejected yesterday by the Prince Georges County Board of License Commissioners.

The license was denied Raymond R. Gramlich, who sought it for Ray's Liquor Store, 4706 Silver Hill rd., Suitland. A delegation of 35 persons opposed granting the permit at the monthly meeting of the license commissioners at Upper Marlboro.

Also submitted in opposition were letters from the Suitland Parent-Teachers' Association and the Suitland Citizens' Association, and a petition signed by 86 persons.

The commissioners also granted four on-sale licenses, approved two applications for transfer of ownership, and postponed action on two other requests until the March session.

An on-sale beer license was granted to Willard W. Willett, for Willett's Groceries, 8009 Marlboro Pike, Forestville; a beer and light wine permit was approved for Clarence L. Harris, representing Meadow's Market, near Upper Marlboro, and beer, wine and liquor licenses were granted to Samuel Arnold, Coney Island Lunch, Laurel, and Sammie C. and Sarah F. Elam, Oak Crest Inn, Laurel.

Ownership transfers were approved from Frank Grayson to Alexander W. Stephens for the Bowie Restaurant, Inc., Bowie; and from Marvin W. Stanfield to Alice B. Campbell for Stanley's Grill, 4320 Gallatin st., Hyattsville.

The commissioners postponed hearing an on-sale beer and light wine license request for Harvey's Restaurant, 2301 Chillum rd., near Mount Rainier, and a transfer application of the Maryland Park Market, 502 65th st., Maryland Park.

Pleas for Drug For Seasickness Swamp Doctors

Two Johns Hopkins Hospital doctors who reported they found a preventive and cure of seasickness and other forms of motion sickness were paling yesterday at the commotion.

Drs. Leslie N. Gay and Paul E. Carliner said they were being swamped by requests for the drug, dramamine.

They don't have it for sale; a Chicago firm produces it, and it has not been approved by Federal Food and Drug Act administrators, so it isn't even available under doctor's prescription, they said.

Medina Shuts Off More Red Attacks On Jury System

New York, Feb. 24 (AP).—Federal Judge Harold R. Medina today put down two more attempts by counsel for 11 indicted United States Communist leaders to further their attack on the Federal jury system there.

In rapid order, Medina denied motions that most of the records of the office of the Federal jury clerk be produced at the conspiracy trial and that a master be named to make a broad study of the records.

Referring to the application for the appointment of a master, Medina said such an action could mean a two-year delay in the trial.

The defense charges that the way jurors are picked here discriminates against the poor and members of minority groups, including Jews and Negroes, and in favor of the rich.

The 11 members of the Communist Party's national committee are charged with conspiring to advocate the overthrow of the United States Government.

Keep Penny Postcard, Rep. Hall Urges House

By The Associated Press

Representative E. A. Hall (R., N. Y.) implored the House yesterday to rally to the defense of the penny postcard. It is an American institution, he told his colleagues, and Congress should reject a Post-office Department recommendation that the postcard rate be raised to 2 cents.

"Doubling this would mean that the rank and file of our people would be unable to keep in touch with their loved ones," he declared.

Catholic Leader Backs McMahon Bill

The director of the Department of Education for the National Catholic Welfare Conference yesterday defended Catholic youths as "first class citizens, entitled to first class service in health, bus transportation and reading material."

The director, Msgr. Frederick Hockwalt, stated his views in an address to the governing board of the Catholic Daughters of America on pending congressional bills on Federal aid to education.

He asked the Catholic Daughters to study not only the Thomas-Taft bill in Congress but also the McMahon-Johnson measure. "I, myself, indorse the provisions of the McMahon-Johnson measure and I would like to have the members of your organization study it, and from your own convictions, come to the same agreement with me."

Msgr. Hochwalt, who spoke at the final session of the 3-day CDA board meeting in the Statler Hotel, believes that the man on the street would be sympathetic to his proposals.

At a morning meeting of the CDA board, Bishop Vincent S. Waters, of the Dioceses of Raleigh, N. C., said that the heart of Christianity, the Catholic Church, was the first to receive the brunt of the militant atheism attack.

"It is too late, short of war, to do much about the glorious religious martyrs on the backstage side of the iron curtain," he said. "But we, the audience before the curtain, for whom the show has been staged, should at least remember the moral of the play."

Calling Communism the "religion of Satan," he said had the elections in Italy gone the other way, the world would now lament the fate of Pope Pius XII.

"The answer to atheism is not war but theism in its fullest sense and that means religion to the Jew, Protestant and the Catholic," he declared.

Miss Rita Schaefer, committee secretary for the Catholic Association for International Peace, in discussing the United Nations and human rights, said the major defect of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights is the nonrecognition of God as the source of man's right.

Californians Flee Pounding Waves

Redondo Beach, Calif., Feb. 24 (U.P.).—One hundred families rushed from their homes today when the worst high tide in years pounded the shoreline with mountainous waves.

The waves broke windows, knocked down walls and washed away porches. Water flowed 4 feet deep in the streets.

Police and street maintenance crews went from window to window exacuating families.

The pounding surf threw up big rocks weighing as much as 50 pounds on ocean-front streets as it battered the seawall. Rocks weighing up to 5 pounds flew in second-story windows.

Prillaman Enters Race For Governor of Virginia

Martinsville, Va., Feb. 24 (AP).—Virginia's Democratic gubernatorial race became a five-man affair today with the announcement of the candidacy of Mayor Nick Prillaman, 57, of Martinsville.

Prillaman who indicated some weeks ago his intention to run, formally announced with a 14-point platform on which he will base his campaign.

Candidates who had announced earlier for the August primary nomination are:

State Senator John S. Battle of Charlottesville who appears to have the support of the dominant Democratic organization; Horace H. Edwards, former Mayor of Richmond; Col. Francis Pickens Miller of Albemarle and Remmie L. Arnold, Petersburg manufacturer.

Among things Prillaman proposed in his platform:

Abolition of the State compensation Board.

Standardization of design and mass construction of new schools.

Establishment of a State insurance division through which State, city, county and town public buildings would be insured.

Popular election of members of the State Corporation Commission and heads of other branches of the State government.

Consolidation of the offices of county and city treasurers and commissioners of the revenue under a director of finance.

Rent control boards in the localities.

Repeal of the poll tax as a voting qualification.

Prillaman said government in Virginia "is dominated by those who have failed to keep pace with modern achievements and—in their zest for power and favoritism—have lost touch with the public interest; especially the interest of . . . the poor, ordinary citizen."

He promised to seek development of industry and agriculture and said that "as Governor I would be quick to recommend the immediate repeal of all class legislation that withholds rights under the constitution from any citizen or groups of citizens."

Prillaman, a native of the Dyers Store section of Henry County, is married and has two daughters and four sons. He is a Baptist, a Pythian, Mason, Elk and Kiwanian, and served on the Martinsville City Council from 1920 to 1924. He was elected mayor in June, 1948, unseating Jesse W. Booker who had held office 12 years.

He is the owner of the Prillaman Co. which manufactures paints and allied products. He was an organizer of the Virginia Furniture Co. here in the early 1920s. The plant now is a part of the American Furniture Co.

Bunche's Achievement

The armistice signed at Rhodes is, as President Truman said yesterday, a tribute to the restraint and statesmanship of the governments of Israel and Egypt. It is also a proof of rare qualities in Dr. Ralph Bunche, whom the U. N. had the good sense to name as acting mediator when Count Bernadotte was murdered. Without Dr. Bunche's tact and persistence, and his sense of timing, the negotiations at Rhodes would have collapsed, with disastrous results for the whole of the Middle East.

It is too early to say that the armistice will bring lasting peace to Israel and the Arab world. The other Arab states will have to join in the armistice, and the U. N. Conciliation Commission will have to produce a long-term agreement before one can be sure that a new chapter in the Middle East has begun. The Rhodes agreement has made it possible, however, to start thinking and talking of a new chapter.

The President rightly called attention to the possibilities of economic development in the Middle East, perhaps with American help, after peace has come. The sooner peace is made, the sooner Arabs and Jews can get busy with the cooperative projects on which the future of the whole area will depend. It is time to sweep away the hatreds of the past and concentrate on the future. It is high time, as President Truman suggested, for "freeing the talents of these Near Eastern peoples for constructive work in the development of their respective countries."

On Privacy

The other day Mr. Hirsch Schwartzberg, a Jewish immigrant admitted under the Displaced Persons Act, attempted to describe his emotion when he was shown to a room at the reception center in New York City and was handed the key to it. Mr. Schwartzberg was not sure whether it was a dream or a miracle. His bewilderment is easily explained by the fact that for the last 10 years or so Mr. Schwartzberg's life has been spent in concentration camps of one sort and another; indeed, he was the last person to leave the Dueppel-Mariendorf Camp in Berlin. In short, it was so long since Mr. Schwartzberg had known any privacy that he had almost forgotten the meaning of it.

This is a way of reminding us that privacy is a precious thing, and not to be taken for granted. A pretty good case could be made for the view that in the long run liberty depends upon the preservation of a minimum of privacy in the life of every person. For where there is no privacy there can be no private life, that is to say, no area of existence upon which the collectivity cannot encroach. A man who lives under constant scrutiny, like the inmates of the prison, soon acquires a prison psychology which, in its more acute manifestations is known to psychiatrists and psychologists as "stir sickness." It is marked usually by a kind of recessiveness, as though the prisoner in his quest for privacy were retreating deeper and deeper into himself.

Thus it is a little disturbing to reflect that the whole tendency of modern civilization is toward less rather than more privacy. Among other factors we might mention the expansion of cities, the universal inadequacy of housing, the predominance of crowds, the disposition to speak of "masses" rather than "people," the collective character of our amusements, and the tendency even on the part of those who have houses to live in, to use them mainly as places in which to sleep. Most of the recent developments in technology are toward the obliteration of privacy. It is true that the installation of telephones, the use of radio and television apparatus, both of which are in a sense invasions of privacy, are still voluntary matters, but the time may come when this will not be so. In some totalitarian countries every apartment building is said to contain a police spy whose duty is to observe and to make reports upon the private behavior of the occupants, and even in the United States the police, in some jurisdictions are authorized to eavesdrop on private conversations.

Of course, total privacy might be as bad as none at all, as for example in the case of the solitary confinement to which recalcitrant or troublesome prisoners are sometimes sentenced. The terrors of being always alone are perhaps even greater than those of being never alone, although some, like the eremite monks, have braved them voluntarily. Nowadays, however, the danger of having, like the prisoners in old-fashioned dungeons, to live a life of utter solitude, seems far less remote than the danger that even a brief solitude will soon be impossible.

Fighting Constitution

Objections to the proposed Atlantic Pact on constitutional grounds seem to us to be a bugbear. The issue was threshed out in great detail before the Senate gave its approval to the United Nations Charter. That Charter, it must be remembered, contemplated the establishment of a U. N. military force that could be used at any time by the Security Council to put down aggression. American troops were to become a part of that force under a simple act of Congress. As such, they were to go into action, in case of necessity, at the direction of the Security Council without any declaration of war by Congress. The United States' consent would be given only by the executive branch as expressed through our U. N. representative.

If the signing of the Atlantic Pact should be followed by creation of a joint defense system in the Atlantic area, the international force could properly operate under a similar arrangement. The result would not be to supersede the power of Congress. Rather, Congress itself would make the decision to act jointly with our allies in setting aside a portion of our armed forces to participate in the international force. The power to commit the Nation to all-out war would still remain in Congress, although, as a practical matter, probably it would always come to the support of the international force, as it has always done in the past in the case of wars initiated by the President in defense of American interests.

If no international force should be created under the Atlantic Pact, the United States could go to the support of its allies under aggressive attack in either of two ways. The President might decide on his own initiative that the assault against one of our allies was an attack against the United States and act immediately to repel it. The authority of the President to resist attack is well established both in constitutional theory and in history. As Mr. Oscar Cox points out in a communication on the opposite page, the question of what constitutes an attack upon this country is not a judicial issue. It is a question for the President's discretion.

In the exercise of that discretion in the case of an attack upon an ally, however, a conscientious President would doubtless ask for a declaration of war before ordering American bombers to take off. That would avoid any possiblity of the President being left with a war on his hands and no support for it in terms of funds, equipment and regimentation of the national economy. While the founding fathers did not create, as Charles Evans Hughes pointed out, an imposing spectacle of impotency, they divided the power to make war successfully between the Executive and Congress and the two branches must pull together to give a real impact to our military might.

In no event can it be assumed that our constitutional system does not lend itself to defense pacts of the type contemplated. If it is to be understood that the President would call upon Congress before moving to implement the treaty in case of aggression against an ally, Congress would be under the strongest sort of obligation to act with appropriate speed. We do not think that Congress would be any more likely to dishonor its obligation than would the legislative body of any other democratic power.

Social Security

The Administration's social security program is tripartite: (1) extension and liberalization of old-age insurance, (2) disability insurance, and (3) a liberalized system of Federal grants to supplement State outlays for the needy. The important thing to remember is that the welfare and insurance bills designed to carry out the Administration's proposals are intimately related. Further increases in the size of Federal aid contributions and use of Federal funds for general assistance purposes can be defended much more effectively if the Federal old-age insurance system is at the same time extended to cover millions of uninsured workers and if insurance benefits are increased to reasonable levels. For, given an adequate system of social insurance covering most employed workers, the great majority of the people will be protected by their insurance benefits from becoming public charges. Comprehensive insurance coverage would reduce permanently and progressively the financial burdens of caring for the needy. And the Federal Government could, as a result, gradually withdraw from the field and let the States assume full financial responsibility for the care of the needy.

Considered only as a temporary transitional means of assisting the States to discharge more effectively their obligation to take care of the needy, the Administration's public welfare bill has much to commend it. For many of our poorer States are at present extremely hard pressed. By varying the proportion of Federal aid contributed with reference to State per capita incomes, the poorer States will be encouraged and assisted to make more adequate relief payments. And by insisting on State compliance with certain minimum administrative standards, the Federal Government can do a great deal to improve the efficiency of State-aid systems. Moreover, there is no logical reason for limiting Federal grants-in-aid to the aged, the blind and dependent children. On the contrary, as the Advisory Council on Social Security says, the present limited system encourages some State and local governments to put an undue proportion of their own funds into those welfare programs that are augmented by Federal funds, with the result that other needy persons are deprived of adequate help from State and local funds.

Conceding the strength of these arguments it would, nevertheless, be most unfortunate for Congress to step up the aid program at this juncture unless it acts at the same time to bring into the old-age insurance system millions of uncovered workers and to increase the scale of insurance benefits. For the present trend toward reliance on aid instead of insurance has already resulted in bringing the average level of relief payments to the aged far above the average of insurance payments. In an article appearing recently in a publication of the United States Chamber of Commerce, John J. Corson emphasized the dangers of this tendency. "The formula for Federal old-age assistance grants," he said, "has been increased three times since 1939. Meanwhile, every proposal for comparable liberalization of old-age and survivors' insurance has been rejected. Simultaneously legislative action in various States, and changing administrative practices, outline a trend in old-age assistance away from precise case-work determinations of individual need and toward Townsend-like, flat pensions determined by mass-production techniques."

Most Americans do not want that kind of prop for their old age. They prefer pensions which they have earned as a right, not doles based on evidence of need. Yet for the millions still denied rights of participation in the insurance system there will be no choice in the matter, unless Congress consents to bring them into the system. The longer action is delayed, the greater will be the number of the aged dependent on relief payments.

Objections to expansion of the insurance system on the ground of its cost to industry lose sight of the fact that relief payments are likewise costly and have to be met by taxes that also burden industry. Moreover, generous Federal participation in State relief programs carries with it the danger that State and local governments will become careless or unnecessarily lavish in disbursing relief funds. There is no such danger from an extension of an insurance system financed by contributions from employers and employes.

There are legitimate grounds of objection to the proposed payment of shorttime sickness insurance benefits since this type of disability can best be determined by local organizations. The proposed scale of old-age and survivors' insurance benefits may also be somewhat higher than warranted, in view of the cost of the insurance system. Insured workers not only have to meet part of that cost through direct contributions, but, as taxpayers, they may eventually have to supply the Government with funds to supplement contributions to the insurance trust fund. However, these are details; the Administration program, viewed as a whole, involves no departures in principle from the system now in force. It merely aims to develop it along lines already laid down, and, above all else, to establish a comprehensive kind of insurance program that will reduce the need for public assistance while making relief payments in the poorer sections of the country more adequate than they now are.

Marshall Plan

President Truman told his press conference yesterday that the Marshall Plan should be continued until recovery in Europe is assured. Later on he amplified his remarks by stating that if Britain's economic recovery has been virtually achieved, as a spokesman for the British government has asserted, aid might not be required for the full four-year period ending in 1952. Both statements are likely to be misinterpreted. For the assertion that American aid should be prolonged until European recovery is assured may induce some participating countries to relax their efforts to speed recovery and emancipate themselves from dependence on the United States and the intimation that aid might be cut off if a country's progress is too rapid is an invitation not to make over-strenuous efforts to reach recovery goals before the aid program terminates.

As a matter of fact, neither Great Britain nor any of the other participating countries is likely to achieve the kind of recovery essential to make them independent of financial assistance before expiry of the Marshall Plan. The economic recovery of Great Britain, for instance, by no means implies that the British have solved the balance of payments problem that is the really difficult undertaking confronting them. Economic recovery will have to go forward at rapid pace for a good many years, if the British are to expand their exports of goods and services sufficiently to obtain the funds with which to pay for essential imports.

This same lack of balance between imports and exports has plagued other western European countries. It accounts for their need of American dollars while they are attempting to increase their domestic productivity and lay the foundation for an expansion of exports that will enable them to finance the purchase of needed imports without relying upon American dollar aid. This is a laborious process. It entails sacrifices on the part of the peoples of all Marshall Plan countries. Their governments should not be encouraged to malinger by holding out hopes that the Marshall Plan will be indefinitely prolonged. Nor should they be discouraged from doing their utmost to speed recovery by any suggestion that aid might be cut off if they recover too fast.

Pepper And The NAM

I listened with interest and not a little disgust to parts of the February 18 clash between Mr. Mosher, National Association of Manufacturers spokesman, at the hearings on the repeal of the Taft-Hartley law, and Senator Pepper of Florida.

Entirely aside from the issues involved and the views expressed, Mr. Mosher is admittedly an outstanding industrialist. His views on a knotty problem were being sought by a committee of the United States Senate. In theory, at least, the committee was bound to accept and weigh his testimony objectively. The testimony he gave was well organized and logically presented. He strove hard to confine his remarks to the question at hand—the Taft-Hartley law.

The Senator, on the other hand, advanced to the fray with an attentive ear cocked in the direction of the representatives of the press and radio. He led off on an excellently objective discussion of the new labor law by announcing that the NAM was an "enemy of democracy." Warming to his work, he bawled a fevered warning to his constituency to the effect that the NAM was the "spearhead and symbol of reactionary business forces in this country who can't see beyond the end of their noses."

At that point, having apparently concluded that all worth-while testimony on the labor law had been gathered the previous week, the stalwart liberal delivered himself of this gem of liberal view and incontestable veracity:

"It was the workers' sons who died on the battlefields while the sons of manufacturers stayed home and got rich."

I, and I suspect a few million others, have long pondered in search of a method whereby the type of legislator exemplified by Senator Pepper and eulogized in the old story of Senator Solomon Spiffledink, could be enrolled in summer stock where his undisputed talents as a ham actor could be translated into dollars and where, at the same time, his utterances for press and radio would be forever stilled.

Confused Values

Three items carried in your February 19 edition show the complete lack of consistent value placed by the Federal Government on incidents that tend to discredit it in eyes of the public. I refer to the case of General Vaughan's Argentine medal, the fallacious spy report from General MacArthur's headquarters in Japan, and the Navy captain who made a "slurring remark" about Senator Kilgore of West Virginia.

General Vaughan, noted for indiscretions, places the United States in the eyes of democratic nations of South America as an inconsistent leader in interhemispheric policies. Just one more contradiction added to the Venezuelan farce!

The Army based its case of Russian spying in Japan on apparently worthless Japanese files, and now before the eyes of the world it must appear ridiculous.

Capt. Ross Dierdorff publicly embarrasses the Navy by asserting Senator Kilgore wasn't "good enough to wipe his shoes on," referring to Admiral Bieri.

You can bet your life on the fact that Captain Dierdorff will be the only one "displaced." General Vaughan gets his medal for doing relatively nothing. Army public relations give out a "so sorry please," but four months before retirement, the captain gets relieved of duty.

I think Captain Dierdorff should be permitted to retire without any more than a personal reprimand, which he already has received. A man who can stand up and be ready to "take his medicine" is indeed rare on the news page. That, of course, is not enough in itself to mitigate the issue. But the service the captain has rendered our Nation is.

In the case of the beaten cabbie The Washington Post has taken an admirable stand for simple justice.

Our Russian Policy

Your editorial of February 20 describing the Norwegian visit to Russia further increases my belief that this country's policy on Russia is mere "tilting at windmills." Why do we expend 15 billion dollars on rearming; why are we so fascinated by the idea that Russia constitutes a menace to us? Apparently Russia is not arming for aggression militarily, but instead fears war. Apparently she is intent on rebuilding herself in order to give her people the things they are promised.

Instead of sympathy for these people we gloat over their misfortune. Do we ever stop to realize that Russia lost 10 million dead in the war? That in the area of war destruction six million houses were destroyed leaving 26 million homeless? That there are 20 million war orphans? That the industry which can rebuild the destroyed houses was itself destroyed? That therefore, that industry must be rebuilt first in order to accomplish the vast job of home reconstruction?

In other words Russia was the battlefield for the most destructive war of all time and any attempts to determine rightness or wrongness of her policies from our secure and untouched country must be necessarily outside our capabilities.

Presidential Intemperance

If President Truman is correctly quoted, he should apologize to the American people who believe in clean chaste speech, for the use of an expression that is the very height, or depth, of poor taste, and objectionable phraseology. Such utterances from anyone exhibit a disregard of respect for human personality and are a reflection upon the person involved. Coming from the Chief Executive of a great Nation, dedicated to high ideals and good living, the words are a poor example to American citizens, and especially to American youth.

C. FRED WILLIAMS,
Minister Clarendon Methodist Church.
Arlington.

The uproar over the vulgar epithet which Mr. Truman threw at Drew Pearson is loud, pained and unfair.

Of course Mr. Truman's language was not of presidential caliber. Nor is Mr. Truman, himself—either by education, experience or intellectual capacity. He cannot be blamed for that.

The 47 million voters who failed to go to the polls November 2 are responsible for the election of a man who has few qualifications for the Presidency.

EDWIN C. KENT.
Washington.

Referring to President Truman's defense of Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, Drew Pearson has stated: "If Mr. Truman is trying to discourage the right of fair comment, then he too has another think coming . . . But when his staff members accept medals from a military dictator . . . then it's the public's business . . ."

It is odd indeed that the President should select Washington's Birthday to defend General Vaughan when it was George Washington who established the principle that no American military man or President should receive gifts or decorations from foreign governments. Add to that the fascistic nature of the Peron dictatorship in Argentina, and what do you get?

ROY H. WOOD.
Washington.

I would like to be enlightened as to the veracity of the statement attributed to Drew Pearson to the effect that it was George Washington who laid down the principle that no American military man or President should receive a gift or decoration from a foreign government. Mr. Pearson is also quoted to the effect that a law on that matter was passed by Congress then.

The Constitution of the United States itself includes a provision under which:

"No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States; And no person holding any office of profit or trust under them, shall, without the consent of the Congress, accept of any present, emolument, office or title, of any kind whatever, from any king, prince or foreign state." (Article 1, Section 9, Subdivision 8.)

No doubt that there are plenty of persons who come under the provision cited. Drew Pearson could have taken this up months ago if he had simply wanted the law enforced. However, he only takes it up now, when he wants to embarrass an aide of the President. So for that reason I approve the President's tart rejoinder that any "So-and-So" who thought he could cause any of his aides to be discharged by him for accepting a foreign decoration had another think coming.

However, as one experienced in connection with foreign decorations, I wish to say that there ought to be a law passed forbidding the acceptance of a decoration from any foreign government by anyone in the service of the United States, no matter in what branch, unless it was received for services while such a foreign government was an ally of the United States in a war of recent date. On any other basis, it is obvious that decorations of the sort are not given to stimulate good will, but are in the nature of polite "bribes" to influence the favorable action of officials.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

The Influence Business

NOTHING succeeds like success. The Democratic National Committee has rarely, if ever, seen such a clamor for tickets to a Jackson Day dinner as this year when the Democratic treasury will be enriched by perhaps $300,000 here in Washington alone.

In the fine flush of victory certain things are happening that worry more thoughtful Democrats assembled for the Jackson Day rally. They are fearful of an alliance between old-fashioned spoils politics and the lobby-lawyer, fix-it industry in the Capital.

Chairman Howard McGrath of the Democratic committee has moved out of his spacious office at headquarters and turned it over to the new executive vice chairman, William M. Boyle, jr. Besides his job as Senator, McGrath has extensive business interests in Rhode Island and the objective is to turn the actual work of the committee over to Boyle.

This includes the all-important function of dispensing patronage. It could well be a full-time job.

But Boyle will continue to run his own law office in Washington and that is one reason for the concern. Anyone with the power officially to allocate Democratic patronage would have a tremendous advantage in walking into a Government department as a lawyer to do a service for a client.

A DINNER was given in Boyle's honor the other evening. Most of the members of the Cabinet were present, including Attorney General Tom C. Clark and several of his top assistants.

Present also were Boyle's associates in his law firm. One of them is Daniel J. Hanlon of Boston. Hanlon, who was close to Mayor James J. Curley, was an attorney in the Bureau of Internal Revenue from 1933 to 1938.

It was a pleasant get-together with none of the solemn speeches that blight so many Washington dinners. And if any important official present had any doubt about the identity of Boyle and his law partners, they were there on display.

Boyle, who worked hard for the President in the fall campaign, came up through the Pendergast school of political organization. During part of President Truman's service as a Senator, he was his assistant and later he worked for Robert E. Hannegan when Hannegan became Democratic national chairman.

Most of us are too likely to scoff at the professional politician while we neglect our own political responsibilities. That is not the point here. Professionals who have come up the hard way are essential in any effective political organization.

The point is that Boyle does not receive a salary from the National Committee, his income deriving from his law practice in Washington where a good word spoken to a friend is often more precious than pearls and rubies. Boyle says he is careful to avoid what is called around here the "influence business," taking only legitimate cases at law.

BUT, granted the noblest intentions and the highest ideals, this would seem to be a difficult position to maintain. The actual day-to-day direction of the National Committee should be in the hands of a full-time expert who knows politics and the country. To get a good man who would give all his allegiance and capacity to the job, he should be paid a sufficient salary, certainly not less than $25,000.

The need for a well-paid executive, divorced as nearly as possible from outside temptations and pressures, applies particularly to the party in power. The Republicans on the outside looking in can worry along perhaps with Representative Hugh Scott.

President Roosevelt had been in office less than a year when his attention was called to the fact that lawyer members of the Democratic National Committee had moved in on Washington to collect huge fees for pulling favors out of Government departments. He expressed strong opposition to this practice and there were some resignations from the committee.

No one would be naive enough to say that this put an end to the influence industry in Washington. The busy fixers found other channels. But it did end what had threatened to become a legalized alliance between the Democratic Committee and the enormously profitable influence industry.

The Truman Administration cannot afford anything even resembling that kind of alliance. A party that professes to represent the aspirations of the average man cannot afford to yield to the ordinary temptations of political power. To do so will be to reduce the victory of last November to the weight and significance of a bad hangover.

Criticism Of The Army

I cannot resist taking advantage of your column to voice my indignation over the unfair criticism of Army officers in the press. They are treated with contempt and derision as if they were arrogant, incompetent and lacking in intelligence. The editorials and cartoons are surely not worthy of American newspapers.

Atlantic Pact

A Communication

THE PROPOSED Atlantic Pact raises grave issues of high policy for the United States. It is extremely difficult for any nation to lay down precisely the conditions under which it will commit itself now to use armed force in the future. Such problems must be faced squarely by those who have the responsibility for conducting our foreign affairs.

These issues are far too important for anyone to take refuge in the comfortable but erroneous theory that they need not be faced because our Constitution does not legally permit them to be faced. Whether the United States should give any commitment to use military force, and upon what conditions, are very hard questions indeed. But the questions are questions of policy and not of legal power. It is clearly demonstrable that the United States is legally under no greater disability than any other sovereign nation to make a solemn commitment with another state that each will use armed force to repel an attack on the other.

THE DEBATES in the Constitutional Convention, the provisions of the Constitution itself, and the subsequent conduct of this Nation have clearly established the following:

1. The President and the Senate are authorized to enter into treaties of alliance with other nations involving commitments to defend each other against invasion or attack.

2. The President, as Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces, has the power "to make war" to the extent necessary to repel sudden invasion or attack. What constitutes an invasion or attack is for the President to determine, either in advance by a formal declaration of policy such as the Monroe Doctrine or by the making of a treaty with Senate approval, or at the moment when it occurs. Throughout our history, all three methods have been used to extend our concept of what constitutes an attack on the United States.

3. When and if the President "makes war" to repel an attack, the Congress has the power "to declare war" in support of this act, or not to do so as it sees fit. Whether the President acts pursuant to a Senate-ratified treaty or on his own initiative, Congress is, of course, under strong moral compulsion to stand behind him. But despite the position in which Congress would thus find itself, the framers of the Constitution never indicated that the legal power of the President and the Senate to take such action is or ought to be limited.

I

ONE OF the major purposes for creating the Union was self-defense. The Constitution attempted to give the most ample powers necessary for this purpose. As Hamilton said, "The means of security can only be regulated by the means and the danger of attack. They will in fact be ever determined by these rules and by no others. It is in vain to oppose constitutional barriers to the impulse of self-preservation."

In the minds of the framers, an important means of self-defense was the power to make treaties of alliance involving solemn commitments between nations to defend each other against attacks by third parties. The constitutional debates do not indicate that the treaty-making power was to be limited to such innocent topics as commerce, navigation or the standard of weights and measures. The whole flavor of the intense discussion of the treaty-making power in the convention debates and in the Federalist Papers shows full appreciation of the fact that treaty-making involved great powers that could be used to save the Nation.

Solemn treaty commitments to defend others against attack or invasion were not unknown to the framers of the Constitution. Under the Articles of Confederation, the United States in 1778 entered into a treaty with France for this very purpose, guaranteeing to the King of France, against all the world, his continued possession of French territories in North America. Article VI of the Constitution specifically reaffirmed this obligation to France by providing that "all treaties made or which shall be made under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land."

This pledge was made in the very same document which gives to Congress the power to "declare war." It proves specifically that, in the minds of the framers, considerations might exist—and in fact did exist under a treaty already made—which would morally oblige the Congress to declare war.

SIMILARLY, Article IV, Section 4, of the Constitution states that "the United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government and shall protect each of them against invasion." Here again is a specific commitment, contained in the Constitution itself, that under certain considerations, the Congress is morally obliged to exercise its power to declare war, in order to protect the States against invasion.

It was because treaties were recognized to be such grave affairs that the framers debated at great length whether the President alone should be allowed to make them, whether the Senate alone should be allowed to make them, and whether the approval of the House of Representatives should be required. In support of the proposition that the approval of the House should be required, it was argued that treaties were "the supreme law of the land" and binding on the Congress and should, therefore, be approved by the entire Congress in advance.

The argument was rejected after James Madison had pointed out in the debates "the inconvenience of requiring a legal ratification of treaties of alliance for the purposes of war." The conclusion is inevitable that in committing the treaty-making power to the President and to the Senators, the framers knew they were giving to these men, and to these men alone, the power to commit the United States to make war to the extent of repelling attacks against our treaty allies.

II

THE CONSTITUTION states significantly that the Congress shall have power to declare war. An earlier draft had given the Congress the power to make war, but make was changed to declare during the debate of August 17, 1787, on motion of James Madison of Virginia and Elbridge Gerry of Delaware, for the specific purpose of "leaving to the Executive the power to repel sudden attacks." The change was supported by Roger Sherman of Connecticut on the ground that "the Executive should be able to repel and not to commence war."

It has never been contested that the President has the power to use armed force in order to repel invasions or attacks. This means that the President has the power to "make" war, even though Congress has the power to declare war.

The President's power to use military force to repel an attack has been exercised on numerous occasions in our history, the most recent, of course, being the Sunday of Pearl Harbor. When the Japanese planes began shooting on our fleet, the Navy did not have to wait for instructions from Congress before shooting back. Significantly, when the President subsequently asked Congress to declare war, he asked for a declaration that since the Japanese attack on December 7 "a state of war has existed." The Congress thereupon resolved that "the state of war . . . which has thus been thrust upon the United States is hereby formally declared," and authorized the President to employ the entire resources of the Government to bring the conflict to a successful termination.

Since the President can himself repel an attack, the crucial question is what constitutes an attack. This is a political question for the President to decide. It is not a legal question. The Prize Cases, 2 Black 635 (U. S. Sup. Ct., 1862).

THROUGHOUT our history, it has been the policy of our Presidents to regard an attack against the vital interests of the United States in the same manner as an attack against its physical territories. In 1823, President Monroe declared that "any attempt on the part of other powers to expand their system to any portion of the Western Hemisphere is dangerous to our peace and safety" and "the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States."

In 1904, Theodore Roosevelt obtained Senate approval of a treaty which said categorically that "The United States guarantees and will maintain the independence of the Republic of Panama."

President Wilson asked for war against Germany in 1917 on the ground that Germany had "committed repeated acts of war" against us, even though these acts had been committed far from our shores. In 1922, Secretary of State Hughes signed the Nine-Power Pact, with Senate approval, in which we gave a commitment and obtained similar commitments to respect the territorial integrity of China.

In 1941, President Roosevelt authorized American naval craft patrolling out to the middle of the Atlantic to "shoot on sight" when German naval vessels were encountered. In 1947, President Truman requested and obtained Senate approval of the Rio Pact, which stated the principle that an attack on any American State would be regarded as an attack on all the American States. Today, the President and the Senate are considering whether, when and how to announce that an attack against western Europe will be regarded as an attack on the United States.

It thus appears that our Presidents (and the Senate) have steadily broadened our notions of what constitutes an attack and that they have employed the treaty-making procedure, just as President Monroe employed his famous message to Congress, as a useful means of defining, for the benefit of other nations, precisely what we would regard as an attack on ourselves. And once the President has decided that an attack has been committed, this legal power to repel that attack with armed force is clear. For example, if an attack is committed against an American nation—defined in the Rio Pact to be an attack against the United States—the President, if he thinks the situation requires, has clear power to repel such an attack by armed force, before asking Congress to declare war. When the situation permits, any President will undoubtedly prefer to consult Congress first. But there may not be time to indulge this choice. "There frequently are occasions when days, nay, even hours are precious," said John Jay in 1788. "As in the field, so in the Cabinet, there are moments to be seized as they pass, and they who preside in either should be left in capacity to improve them."

III

WHEN THE President finds it necessary to repel an attack without waiting for Congress, it is, of course, for the Congress to decide whether to follow that action by a declaration of war pledging all the resources of the Nation to a military conclusion of the dispute. The Congress can decide that the President acted hastily or improperly, and decline to declare war. Or, as has always proved true in the past, it can decide that he acted properly and back his action by a declaration of war.

The problem does not become essentially different when the President's action in repelling an attack is taken pursuant to a treaty commitment rather than in the absence of any such commitment. The President has power to repel an attack, treaty or no treaty. Once the President has exercised this power, the Congress is under strong compulsion to support him, treaty or no treaty. In this respect the treaty itself makes little difference. In either case, the Congress can be compelled to take action only by its own conscience. There is no national or international tribunal which can force it to support the President.

IT IS APPARENTLY true that Congress has never failed to take legislative action required by a treaty commitment. A serious and inescapable question of policy therefore, arises each time the President and the Senate consider whether and how to engage the good faith of the United States in any treaty commitment to repel an attack against another nation. But the question is not one of legal power under the Constitution.

The President and the Senate have the power to make such treaties and the President has the power to use armed force to carry them out. While the making of such a treaty creates the possibility that Congress may be confronted with a fait accompli, it also creates the possibility that a potential aggressor may be deterred from attacking. It can hardly create the second possibility without creating the first. That is the nub of the problem—not whether the President and the Senate can take action, but whether they should take action, and of what kind.

When the Constitution was being debated many people argued that the powers of making treaties and repelling attacks were too great to be lodged in the President and the Senate. It was pointed out that these powers might be abused and that officeholders might be corrupt or inept. But the framers expected the President and the Senators to be men of the highest character and achievements, fully capable of facing and making great decisions. "With such men," to quote John Jay again, "the power of making treaties may be safely lodged." This argument was accepted by the American people in 1789. Nothing in our past or current history indicates that their judgment was erroneous.

Maryland Kills Ban on Sunday Liquor Sales

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 24 (AP).—Using a parliamentary maneuver which cut off debate, the House killed a bill today which would have banned beer and liquor sales throughout Maryland on Sunday.

The Sunday-closing measure was brought to the House floor with an unfavorable committee report.

Delegate Deran (D., Harford), who sponsored the bill, made a motion to override the report.

Delegate McNulty then moved to table the bill. The motion was not debatable and carried, 62-40.

Afterwards, House leaders indicated the bill will remain on the table for the rest of the session. It would have placed taverns in Baltimore city and 10 counties in the same position as those in the 13 counties with Sunday-closing laws.

The much debated measure adding a sixth grounds for divorce cleared its last legislative hurdle when the House, after a series of roll calls, concurred in a Senate amendment and sent it along to the Governor.

The delegates voted down a bill originally designed to limit advertising by chiropodists, after Delegate Luber (D., of Baltimore) contended it would give practitioners the right to perform "major surgical operations" on the feet.

The vote was 39-39, and the measure failed for lack of a constitutional majority.

If the divorce bill is signed by the Governor, it will allow a plaintiff to sue for absolute divorce if the defendant has been convicted of a felony, sentenced to prison for three years or more, and has served 18 months.

It touched off the hottest House debates of the session before it was passed originally and sent to the Senate a few weeks ago. It came back to the House today for concurrence in a technical amendment tacked to it by the Senators, and the delegates got into a battle of roll calls. The final tally was 63-48.

A group of county police chiefs asked the House Judiciary Committee for new laws to regulate pawnbrokers and private detectives. They also went on record in favor of a bill which would ban the sale of "switchblade" knives, and another to confine fortune tellers to unfolding the past and present—but not the future.

Matter Of Fact

What Sort Of Germany?

By Joseph Alsop

BERLIN.—By any test, remarkable progress has been achieved in Germany. The time when you found here a whole nation living as scavengers among the ruins is drawing to a close. The simplest proof lies in the fact that industrial output in the merged Anglo-American zones has risen by 250 per cent since 1947.

To be sure, this brings production up to only three quarters of the 1936 average, and western Germany now has millions more mouths to feed on the same poor acreage. Yet rations have already been increased to an average of 2000 calories daily. The shattered cities are beginning to be repaired. The ordinary German, after three years of slow starvation, is beginning to experience a sort of drab sufficiency.

Perhaps this will disturb the school of thought that blandly approves slow starvation for tens of millions of human beings. The more civilized must warmly admire Gen. Lucius D. Clay for jamming through the needed measures in the teeth of passive resistance at home and bitter opposition abroad. But all thinking men must also recognize that the material improvement in Germany does not help much to solve the crucial German problem. As it has developed, the German problem now has three fundamental elements, all three of which need to be squarely faced without further delay.

FIRST, Soviet policy in Germany has been frustrated by the failure of the Berlin blockade. There is no ground for the fear that western Germany may be attracted into the Soviet orbit, unless the Western powers behave downright insanely. Indeed, so long as Berlin remains an island of freedom, the Soviets will have the utmost difficulty in organizing even their own zone to suit their purpose.

Second, the orderly British Foreign Office accepted the permanent division of Germany as a basic policy assumption more than a year ago. This is true because the Western powers cannot allow Germany to be united under Soviet auspices, while the Kremlin will not tolerate a truly independent, united Germany. If they cannot make all of Germany into a satellite, the Soviets will hang onto their own zone. Hence the division will endure.

Third, in these circumstances, the Western powers have no alternative but to build up a healthy economic life and decent political system in western Germany without delay. This was the aim of the London agreement, providing for the establishment of a west German government. But the French, with their racial fear of the Germans, have been whittling away at the London agreement ever since it was signed.

THE FRENCH have had two aims. In their own zone of Germany, many important industries are strangely passing into French ownership. The zone staggers under a swollen occupying force that consumes nearly 60 per cent of the tax revenue. For these and other reasons, one French aim has been to insure that their control of their zone will be impaired as little as possible. Second and still more important, the French recognize no need to give the Germans a decent national life. Their attitude and arguments are almost exactly the same as those used against their own country by the Prussian, Blucher, after Waterloo. Thus, they have insisted that the projected west German government be given as little power as possible.

There is no space here for technicalities. It is enough to say that the French have succeeded in reducing the projected west German government almost to the status of a colonial administration operating under not one viceroy but three—the French, British and American military governors or their civilian successors.

It is better, of course, to have a west German government on this model than to continue the impossible expedient of direct rule by the occupying forces. But if the west German government is to be merely colonial in status, it will have all the familiar defects of colonial administrations everywhere. These range from peevishness to irresponsibility. Furthermore, if Germany is to be condemned to a colonial period, it must be also recognized that any constitutional system set up during this period cannot last. For it will be tossed into the discard by the Germans as soon as they regain their independence.

WHILE colonial political patterns always vanish in this manner, economic patterns survive. Hence, some of the wiser Americans and British here are taking new interest in the future of the Ruhr, which has always in any case been the key to Germany. They argue that the eventual German political structure will be shaped by Germany's economic structure. German economic structure, in turn, will be determined by the fate of the Ruhr. And for this very reason these men actively advocate socialization of the Ruhr industrial complex.

They point out that if the German economy is handed back to the Krupps and the Stinneses, the old gang will either attempt new aggressions, or will try doing a deal with the Russians as they are now trying to do a deal with the French Right. On the other hand, it is argued, either development is almost unimaginable in a Germany drawn into free social democracy by the socialization of the Ruhr, and led by such men as Berlin's magnificently courageous, deeply civilized Socialist Mayor, Ernst Reuter.

In short, they believe that granting the broad masses of the German people the maximum of social progress is the only guarantee against both the great dangers of the German future. In the present sorry situation this line of reasoning is singularly appealing. Certainly some such bold, imaginative measure must be taken if the western powers are not to risk losing by their own follies and hesitations all they have gained here by Soviet brutality.

Prince Georges Flood Control Bill to Be Introduced Today

By Phillip J. Austensen
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 24—Legislation to authorize Maryland and Prince Georges Conty agencies to participate in proposed flood control at Bladensburg will be introduced Friday in the House of Delegates by the Prince Georges County delegation.

Perry O. Wilkinson, chairman of the county delegation, announced tonight that the bill has been prepared and is ready to be presented. The act would take effect June 1, 1949.

The bill will authorize the Prince Georges County commissioners, the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission and the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission to issue bonds to finance flood control projects.

Bonds Authorized

The Prince Georges commissioners are authorized to issue bonds not to exceed $1,500,000 for terms not to exceed 40 years at an interest rate not to exceed 4 per per cent and to levy annually the amount required to pay the principal and interest for the current year.

The Sanitary Commission is authorized to issue bonds not in excess of $500,000 at not more than 4 per cent interest, and the Prince Georges commissioners are authorized to levy for the annual payments on the property in the sanitary district of the county.

The Park and Planning Commission is authorized to issue bonds not to exceed $250,000 with the same terms, to be levied for in the metropolitan district of the county.

The Maryland State Roads Commission is directed to pay out of its general funds such sums as are required to pay for the cost of building and relocating all State highways and bridges within the limits of the flood control and navigation projects as may be approved by the Federal Government in an amount not to exceed $1,500,000.

To Set Up Separate Fund

All money collected by the agencies named will be turned over to the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, which is directed to establish a separate fund, to be known as the "flood control and navigation fund," from which all costs other than the amounts paid by the Federal Government will be paid. The proceeds from the bonds issued by the county commissioners are to be earmarked for constructing and relocating county highways and bridges and construction of commercial and recreational boat basins.

The sanitary commisison bonds are to pay for constructing necessary internal drainage facilities and relocation of utility structures, and the park and planning funds are to be used for requisition of land and buildings necessary to make way for the projects.

The sanitary commission also is named as the agency that will be responsible for administration, maintenance and operation of the flood control and navigation projects. It will fix the charges for use of the recreational and commercial navigation facilities and the Park and Planning Commission will have use of the lands incident to the project for park and recreational purposes so long as they do not conflict with the primary purpose of flood control.

Maryland Speeds Mental Health Plan

State legislators and special investigators yesterday speeded up their studies of mental health problems in Maryland at the Governor's request.

New, "practical" deadline for the full report of the Senate-House Joint Committee studying the problems was set for the end of next week or beginning of the following week, it was learned last night.

The hurry-up order was issued by Governor Lane to pave the way for his special message on the supplemental budget, expected to follow the joint committee's report, informed sources said. It was pointed out that the legislators might take a full month to pass on the budget matters.

The Governor's action closely followed a report of the Council of Psychiatric Societies which detailed in 11,000 words its month-long analysis of Maryland's mental hygiene system, suggesting corrective measures.

Other mental health investigations under way in the State include independent investigations by three top men in the field, appointed last summer by the Governor; a personnel survey at mental institutions in the State by a firm of consulting engineers, and a survey of construction costs to improve and augment present facilities. All reports are channelled to the joint committee, headed by Senator Paul G. Stromberg of Howard County.

The unsolicited report of the Council of Psychiatric Societies recommend a 15-million-dollar annual operating budget for State mental health care, increased powers for the State commissioner of mental hygiene, special training programs for psychiatric workers, and wide expansion of present facilities.

The council, headed by Dr. Theodore Lidz, associate professor of psychiatry at Johns Hopkins in Baltimore and president of the Maryland Psychiatric Society, reported that overcrowding in State mental institutions has resulted in conditions "not only barbaric but wasteful of lives and money."

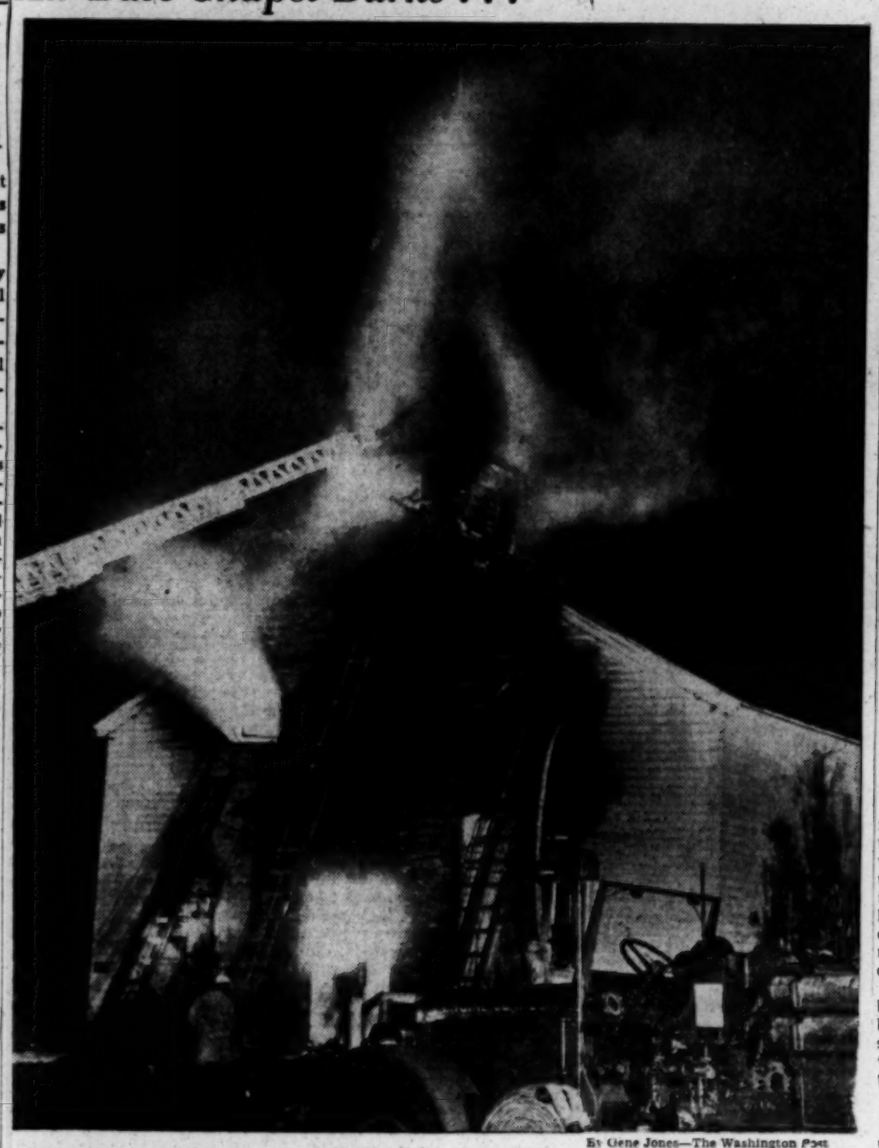
Air Base Chapel Burns . . .



By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

TWO-ALARMER—The steeple of the chapel at Bolling Air Base is wreathed in smoke as firemen fight the two-alarm blaze which swept the structure in the hours before dawn yesterday. The interior was damaged and the organ rendered useless

Chapel Blaze Laid to Airman

To Hospital for Observation

By 6 p. m. yesterday, Falterman had admitted setting fire to the chapel "by accident," base officials disclosed. It was not until 10 p. m., however, that he confessed he did it on purpose.

Falterman will be turned over to Station Hospital authorities today for observation.

Chaplain (Col.) Charles I. Carpenter, chief of Air Force chaplains, conferred yesterday with Colonel Grubbs and sent to Pennsylvania for an organ to replace the Hammond instrument destroyed in the fire.

The post theater will be used for religious services, starting Sunday, Chaplain Karnell announced.

Municipal Night Session Slated

Problems of Prince Georges County communities will be outlined at 7 p. m. Monday at the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club in a "Municipal Night" meeting sponsored by the county Chamber of Commerce.

George C. McLeish, a county delegate to the State Legislature, will discuss bills to permit incorporated towns to enter voluntarily into contracts among themselves and with the county and grant to town police jurisdiction outside their town limits in emergencies.

$8,625,000 In Land Goes To Indians

Secretary of the Interior Krug yesterday started allotting an estimated $8,625,000 worth of land in and near Palm Springs, Calif., to 71 Indians and the heirs of four dead Indians.

Owners of hotels, cafes, shops and night clubs now on Indian land will continue paying rent to the Palm Springs Indian agency although the lands pass from tribal to individual Indian ownerships, department officials said.

They said the land will continue in Government trust and for the present, at least, the Indians cannot sell the land or collect rents directly.

Krug approved allotments worth about two million dollars to 23 Indians, and about $340,000 to heirs of four deceased Indians.

The remaining 48 members of the Palm Springs or Agua Caliente tribe will receive later their allotments, worth more than four million dollars.

Each of yesterday's allotments includes a 2-acre town site lot, 5 acres of irrigated land and 40 acres of dry land. The 47-acre plots are worth an estimated $85,000 each.

All the 2-acre lots are in the main business district. Many of the 5-acre plots also are within city limits.

The allotments are made under a Circuit Court of Appeals ruling, upheld by the Supreme Court, that an individual Indian is entitled to a trust patent. In effect, the ruling required the Secretary of the Interior to allot all the Palm Springs reservation lands.

Prices of Beef, Pork Advance In Some Stores of District

For the first time in about six weeks, beef and pork prices were higher in some local stores yesterday, but the price changes were "spotty" and ranged widely.

Meanwhile, Midwest livestock men predicted a beef shortage by summer because of the severe winter toll of cattle and sheep and the tough feeding problem, which forced early marketing.

On the other hand, local veal prices were a little lower, apparently as an overdue reflection of previous weeks' declines in other meat items.

Meat buyers attributed the beef and pork advances to a "firmer" wholesale market as fewer animals are brought to the markets. One said that livestock men may be holding back shipments because of the recent low prices.

Uncertainty as to the price trends of the near future showed in this weekend's steak prices. Sirloin, still well below the 95-cent range of six months ago, remained at 59 cents in some stores, while other dealers increased their top grade price 10 and 12 cents to as high as 75 cents a pound, in one chain.

"Good" and "choice" grades of round steak were quoted at 75 and 79 cents yesterday here, up about 12 cents a pound in one case, while porterhouse ranged from 65 to 79 cents also.

Chuck roast, at 39 to 43 cents, remained the same or increased up to 4 cents a pound during the week, with ground beef generally up 4 cents. The latter, now ranging from 39 to 45 cents a pound, has declined as much as any type of meat during the past six months, from an average of 65 cents.

Mixed price changes were shown by pork products, with sliced bacon remaining about the same, smoked ham up and down in different stores, and pork roasts up to 4 cents a pound more.

One large chain reduced prices on two veal cuts. Veal roast, costing 67 cents a pound there last week was down to 59 cents yesterday. Shoulder chops were reduced from 67 to 65 cents.

The poultry market, with "a good supply and a pretty heavy demand," hasn't changed much recently, Fred Kolker, poultry chairman of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, pointed out. One exception is the market for ducks, which sell at 35 cents a pound at wholesale, compared with 28 to 30 cents six months ago, he said.

Prices of fryers remained about the same this week at 41 to 43 cents a pound in the retail markets. This compares with a general price of 49 cents six months ago.

Butter and egg prices showed little change this week and in many cases remained the same. Top grades of butter ranged from 71 to 73 cents a pound for quarter pound prints in the chain stores, while large Grade A eggs were selling for 59 to 61 cents a dozen. Margarine prices remained generally the same.

Calling M'Arthur Here Vetoed by Committee

The Senate Armed Services Committee decided yesterday not to call General MacArthur from his work in Japan to testify on conditions in the Far East.

Senator Knowland (R., Calif.) had asked that he be summoned as a witness.

MacArthur noted the report of Knowland's request in press dispatches, then wrote Senator Tydings (D., Md.) chairman of the committee, expressing the hope it would not call him. He said his work in Japan was pressing, and he was unable to leave.

Fairfax County Warns Taxpayers

Fairfax County Commissioner of Revenue John W. Ferguson warned county taxpayers yesterday they must still file State and county tax returns by May 1 despite county authorization of employment of a field assessor. Ferguson said the field assessor will make spot checks of returns filed and will contact those who fail to file returns, but that a county-wide door-to-door assessment by this year's deadline will be impossible.

CIO Utility Workers Join Electric Companies

Against TVA Steam Plant

Local No. 175

9 EAST FIFTH ST., (SECOND FLOOR) DAYTON 2, OHIO

Dayton, Ohio
February 22, 1949

Dear Member of Congress:

We have read with concern, the contemplated action being taken by the Congress of the United States, concerning an appropriation to start a steam electric generating plant at New Johnsonville, and we as a Union feel this is going a little too far toward socialism.

We are very much against this type of action and the inclosed copy of a news release given out by our International Officer, William J. Pachler, gives our feelings in the matter and puts us on record as being against the project.

Respectfully yours,

CIO Unit Wants "Progressive Capitalism"

Utility Union Against Federal Operation

BY ALAN PRITCHARD
Daily News Staff Writer

A CIO union that sees government ownership as a dangerous threat to basic American principles is the Utility Workers Union of America.

Their international secretary-treasurer, William J. Pachler, said here Saturday that the Utility Workers are strongly opposed to government competition in business—especially in the light and power business.

A conservative union in a conservative industry is the way Pachler likes to describe his Utility Workers. But don't misunderstand him. He still sees a lot of room for improvement in the relations between private industry and unions.

And he thinks the system of basing the economy of the nation on supply and demand is old and outmoded. The principles which he and his union follow, boil down to a militant progressive capitalism.

Pachler spent several days in Dayton this week as a guest of Utility Workers local 17. He addressed a membership meeting of the local Thursday night.

A native New Yorker, complete with an East Side accent, Pachler was an employe of the Consolidated Edison Co. for 17 years before becoming a full-time union officer.

He started off as a member of the AFL International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, then went into an independent union with the rest of the Consolidated workers. The independent union affiliated with the CIO in August, 1945.

PACHLER'S STATEMENT that the Utility Workers are a "conservative" union is indication of his feelings on Communism and nationalization of power distribution. Pachler and the union are against them both, he said.

"When we say we're against government competition in the power business we aren't beating the bushes for the power companies," Pachler emphasized.

"There are many things wrong with the way some private power companies treat their employes. We're out to correct those things.

"We are beating the bush for a type of living in which private ownership is fundamentally correct. We're not against progressive social measures under our present capitalistic set-up but we are against socialism where the government competes with private enterprise."

The building of power dams and reclamation of unusable land by government authority projects is also not opposed by the union, Pachler said. It is only in the distribution of electrical power that an issue arises.

Pachler believes that the government should turn over power distribution to private companies. Government regulation of the companies might be necessary, he said, but not absolute government control.

The attitude of the union is not altogether unselfish, Pachler admits.

"From a bargaining point we would be much better off dealing with private industry than with a government agency," he said.

BECAUSE of limited populations in the areas where government power projects are located, only a comparatively few people are benefited by low rates, Pachler claimed. At present it is impractical to distribute electrical power more than 500 miles.

"They are trying to sell the power in order to liquidate the cost of the projects," Pachler said.

Regarding the stand of his union on Communism, Pachler pointed out that the Utility Workers were the first to bar Communists from union membership.

"We Americans, and I don't just mean union members but all Americans, have been caught asleep on this issue. It is a serious threat," he said.

"Unless we wake up we will see the time in our generation when we no longer will have the American way of life but something else," Pachler warned.

THIS letter, mailed to every U. S. Senator and Representative, is completely and heartily indorsed by Mr. Joseph A. Fisher, International President of the Utility Workers Union of America of the CIO.

Management of the Nation's electric companies welcomes labor's strong support in the fight against using Federal taxpayers' money to build steam generating plants. In the TVA area, all electricity needed can be supplied without Federal appropriation for the proposed New Johnsonville Steam Plant—thus avoiding a far-reaching precedent for creeping Socialism under which labor as well as management and the public stand to lose their freedoms.

Whitney Gets Post as Aide In Commerce

President Truman yesterday named Assistant Secretary for Air Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney to be Undersecretary of Commerce.

He will succeed William C. Foster, who resigned last spring to become Deputy Administrator of the Economic Cooperation Administration.

Whitney

Whitney, an air veteran of both World Wars, became Assistant Secretary of Air on September 18, 1947, the day the Air Force was set up as a separate service.

He was in charge of civil and military-diplomatic affairs and helped to form policy and supervise the role of air power as an instrument of national policy.

He is president of C. V. Whitney Farms, which include livestock and racing properties in New York and Kentucky. He also is chairman of the Hudson Bay Mining Smelting Co.; president of Whitney Industries, Inc., a lumbering firm, and chairman of Marine Studios, Inc., St. Augustine, Fla.

Whitney was a second lieutenant and a fighter pilot in World War I. He rose to colonel in the last war and served in India.

Government action in changing times can set the stage for public acceptance of equal rights for Negroes, Charles Houston, Washington attorney said last night.

It was the Negro's leader's answer to charges by opponents of civil rights legislation that anti-Negro attitudes cannot be legislated out of existence.

Thus last year's Supreme Court decision forcing the University of Oklahoma to accept a Negro student has resulted in the lowering of racial barriers in five other State universities, he said.

And the Supreme Court decision against the enforcement of restrictive covenants has resulted in "stabilization" rather than the chaos predicted by the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Opening Fellowship Talk

Houston spoke at All Soul's Unitarian Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw., at the opening meeting of this year's "Units for Unity" an annual series of talks on fellowship sponsored by the Interchurch Fellowship.

He dscribed the desperate measures Negroes had to use to get housing when District ecurts allowed the enforcement of covenants when "we had the Washing-Real Estate Board, a Washington newspaper, and the lending institutions working against us."

To get Negroes into white blocks then, he said it was necessary to buy up enough houses in the block at higher prices until real estate men were forced to give up the idea of lawsuits.

The Washington newspaper cited by Houston "refused to accept real estate ads for sale to colored in white neighborhoods unless the ad was cleared by the Real Estate Board," he said.

Attacks Federation

He attacked the Federation of Citizens Association for "picking bones" in the Committee on Segregation in the Nation's Capital's report of last December instead of coming forward with a "constructive program of its own."

Negroes, however, must keep on developing a sense of civic responsibility, to learn that with rights go duties so that integration, when it comes ,will come without harm to the District, he said.

"We have suffered long enough," he said, "so that we can bring to the community a sense of love, charity, brotherhood, and forbearance."

Business Group Favors Sales, Liquor Taxes

The Southwest Businessmen Association voted in favor of the proposed 2 per cent District sales tax, and doubled liquor tax, at a meeting held last night in the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School.

The Southwest Businessmen's Association voted in favor of the proposed 2 per cent District sales tax, and doubled liquor tax, at a meeting held last night in the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School. Hugh Rourke, new president of the group, presided.

College Park Measure Passed by Assembly

Among bills passed yesterday by the General Assembly at Annapolis was one sponsored by the Prince Georges delegation that would change the charter of College Park to eliminate rural classifications for land assessment in the town.

Change the number of town councilmen from four to five.

Provide for appointment of the treasurer, instead of election as at present, and other minor changes.

Also passed was a bill by John R. Reeves (R., Montgomery) to eliminate stays of execution in judgments in Montgomery County.

The Senate approved a bill to permit incorporation of Forest Heights in Prince Georges.

The House also passed a bill placing health officers in St. Marys and Charles Counties under a State law that requires training in sanitary science.

Sales Tax Urged as Aid For Schools

Lincoln, Va. (Spl.). — Increased Federal aid and a Virginia sales tax were among the proposals made here tonight to give Loudoun County schools more money.

The proposals were advanced during a forum at Lincoln High School, sponsored by the Loudoun County Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations.

About 200 persons, from all parts of the county, were preesnt.

The sales tax proposition was advanced by J. Emory Kirkpatrick of Ashburn, a farmer and member of the County Board of Supervisors, who asserted present county tax sources are nearing their limits. He said the county now is faced with a tax raise from $1.25 to $2.

pital. She lapsed into a coma as medical efforts to rid the poison from her system proved futile.

When 27-year-old Dr. Richard L. Whelton came on duty at 4 p. m. and learned that Mrs. Sharpe had been released earlier, he asked police to locate her, which they did. They returned her to the hospital. Her condition was not thought to be dangerous.

Meanwhile, Dr. Whelton contacted Freedman's authorities and learned that the patient there, Jenkins, said a seventh person attended the party. Jenkins said he thought the man's name was "Red Dutch" Field of an unknown address.

Police, alerted by Dr. Whelton, were searching the city last night for a man known by that name, to bring him in for hospital treatment. He was believed to be the man who bought the poison alcohol.

Another victim of "smoke" who had no connection with the Wednesday party, walked into Gallinger last night for treatment. He was identified as Edwin West, 33, of 1423 Calvert st. nw.

It was West who directed police to the hardware store where he said "smoke" could be purchased for some 30 or 40 cents a pint.

Social Security Bill Would Cover Military, 400,000 U. S. Workers

The Administration has given its blessings to legislation that would bring upwards of 400,000 temporary Federal civilian workers under the old-age and survivors feature of the Social Security system.

In addition, the hundreds of thousands of military men and women also would be given Social Security protection under the White House approved bill which was introduced in the House by Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee. Hearings on the measure will start soon.

This is how the bill would affect Federal workers:

1. Only those temporary employes who are not now covered by any other Federal retirement system would be brought under Social Security. These groups would include people appointed for less than a year to temporary jobs; temporaries who are appointed pending the appointment of Civil Service registers; emergency indefinite appointees such as many ECA people, and those who are paid when actually employed, the part-time and intermittent employes.

2. These temporaries would have 1½ per cent deducted from their salaries up to the first $4800 of salary, or a maximum of $72 could be paid into the fund annually by an employe. The deduction would cease the moment an employe was put into a job which was subject to the Civil Service or any other Federal retirement system, and,

3. The temporary Federal workers would be covered only by the old-age and survivors feature of Social Security. They would not be covered by the proposed disability feature in the Doughton bill. This feature would cost half a per cent additional. An Administration adviser who helped write the legislation said it was agreed that the annual and sick leave benefits of temporary employes are sufficient to take care of most disabilities.

This is how military men and women would be affected by the bill:

Service in the armed forces would be counted toward old-age and survivors benefits by Social Security;

Uncle Sam would pay the entire cost of placing military people under Social Security. He would make an annual appropriation to the Social Security trust fund for that purpose. As long as a person is in uniform, he wouldn't need to pay any money into Social Security and all the time he spent in the military would be credited toward a possible Social Security retirement.

The bill would be of direct benefit to the millions of inductees who spend a year or so in the armed forces, any person who doesn't make a career in the military.

Included among the armed services in the bill would be the commissioned services of the Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Public Health Service.

The provision in the bill for civilian employes is certain to create a controversy before the Ways and Means Committee. Some employe leaders will oppose Social Security in any form for Federal workers; others will insist on a direct tie-in of Social Security with the Civil Service retirement system.

SPA: Arthur S. Flemming, president of Ohio Wesleyan University, has been selected for the Warner W. Stockberger Achievement Award which is given annually by the Society for Personnel Administration. The award will be made at a dinner meeting next Tuesday at 6 p. m. in the Agriculture cafeteria. A former Civil Service member, Flemming will speak on the work of the Hoover Commission.

NOTES: Dr. Hans Kohler has been appointed to the electronics staff at the Bureau of Standards. At the same agency, Bruce L. Wilson has been appointed chief of the engineering mechanics section . . . AFL's American Federation of Government Employes has indorsed Donald Dawson, a White House secretary, to be president of the Civil Service Commission.

FWA: Unless there's a sudden change of heart, the Hoover Commission will recommend the abolition of the Federal Works Agency. FWA, along with the civilian activities of the Army Engineers, would be transferred to the Interior Department, which would be made into a sort of public works department.

The commission has already recommended that the space and building maintenance activities of the Public Buildings Administration be transferred to a proposed new Office of General Services. PBA's construction work would be shifted to Interior along with most other FWA activities.

PRA: However, the Hoover task force on the Commerce Department recommended that Public Roads Administration, now in FWA, be transferred to the Commerce Department. Also, that Interior's Fish & Wildlife Service go to Commerce. Top Commerce officials are said to have frowned on the latter proposal.

Tax Study Incomplete

Richmond, Va., Feb. 24 (AP). State Senator Garland Gray of Waverly, chairman of the State Tax Study Commission, said today there is virtually no chance that it can complete its report or even form a conclusion before the August 2 Democratic gubernatorial primary. The group is considering the advisability of a sales tax or tax increase.

Board Drops Opposition To Child Day Care Centers

Commissioner Young Tells House Group City Won't Block Their Continuance

The District Commissioners yesterday departed from their opposition of previous years to continuing Washington's child day care centers.

John Russell Young, president of the Board of Commissioners, told a House district Subcommittee that "we will offer no opposition" to the bill for continuing the centers.

Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) said that as a member of the subcommittee he felt there was great need now for continuing the centers, but that he would be inclined to oppose setting them up as a permanent program.

The centers have been continued by year-to-year legislation since the war. The bill now up for action would make them permanent. It is sponsored by Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.).

Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.) chairman of the subcommittee, called for additional figures to be submitted on the program by the Board of Public Welfare, which operates the centers. Action on the bill was deferred pending the BPW report.

Three witnesses strongly urged the subcommittee to continue the operation of the day care centers.

Mrs. Estelle Bunn, 336 17th pl. ne., said her 4-year-old daughter, Judy, is enrolled in the center at 314 D st. se. Mrs. Bunn said she works for the District Unemployment Compensation Board. She said her pay check is $87.30 twice a month. Out of that she pays $42.50 twice a month for rent, $12 twice a month for Judy's care in the center, and has about $34 left for other expenses for the half-month period.

She said she has difficulty making ends meet, and that if the centers were closed she would have to send her daughter to her parents in Texas.

Miss Gladys Cook, chairman of the advisory committee on child day care centers, and Mrs. Florence Murray, a member of the committee assigned there by the Catholic Charities organization, also called for continuing the program.

Penned Appeal Fails, Rapist Doomed Today

Chief Justice Vinson yesterday denied a last-minute, handwritten appeal from 34-year-old John H. Hall for a stay of execution on conviction of raping an 8-year-old girl.

Hall faces the electric chair in District Jail today.

Motions for a writ of habeas corpus and for a rehearing were denied in District Court and the United States Court of Appeals, respectively.

In his appeal to the Supreme Court, Hall asked for a writ of habeas corpus or a stay of execution. It was denied at 4:35 p. m. yesterday.

Hall was convicted November 19, 1947, and sentenced to death. The Court of Appeals affirmed the verdict.

Hall was convicted of raping the girl on Kenilworth terrace ne. in October, 1946.

Marines Will Call Up 28,000 for Training

The Marine Corps announced yesterday that for the first time all Marine Reserve ground units—about 28,000 men from 105 cities—will be called up for summer training.

All 111 units of the organized reserve will take part in 15-day training periods beginning June 4 at Camp Lejeune, and Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Kindergarten Elimination Is Proposed

A suggestion that kindergarten classes be eliminated in schools where older pupils are on a part-time attendance basis last night was considered "worth looking into" by George E. C. Hayes, Board of Education member.

Hayes addressed the meeting of the District Public Schools Association in the Board Room of the District Building.

Mrs. Charles Price of 71 Darrington st. sw., mother of a child scheduled to enter kindergarten next term and a former teacher, offered the suggestion as a means to provide immediate relief to overcrowded school conditions.

Admitting that the measure might be disadvantageous to entering school children, she contended that such a disadvantage would not be so serious as curtailing the instruction of older children.

"I don't want my child to miss kindergarten," Mrs. Price said, "but I consider that preferable to his not receiving adequate instruction in an older grade."

Recommending that the beginners then enter directly the first grade a year later, she maintained that the advance from kindergarten to first grade is "more a matter of age and maturity than of learning," and that the child could attain these qualities through home instruction or attendance at play schools of the Recreation Department.

This partial solution has not been considered by the Board of Education, Hayes said, but he considered it "worth looking into." He would not comment on the advisability of such a step, saying that it was a matter of determination by educators and that he was a layman in such matters.

Hayes urged a closer check by citizens organizations "such as yours" on the actions of the board as the only means of obtaining best results from the board.

M'Lean Rent Rise of 6.8% Is Confirmed

Cogswell Upholds Examiner's Action; Dormitory Rooms Kept at $34.50

Earlier decisions boosting rents on apartments of McLean Gardens, one of the District's largest housing developments, and denying an increase on dormitory room rents were confirmed yesterday by District Rent Control Administrator Robert F. Cogswell.

Cogswell upheld the action of Rent Examiner Denis K. Lane in authorizing a 6.87 per cent increase on the rents of the 723 apartments in the Wisconsin ave. development.

Yesterday's decision will raise present rents ranging from $50 a month for one room and bath to $87.50 for four rooms and bath to new levels of $53.50 to $93.50. Rents of the 1174 dormitory rooms will remain at $34.50 a month with the exception of a few which rent for other amounts, Cogswell said.

About 700 apartment holders had appealed Lane's decision after he declined to reconsider the 6.87 per cent increase. On the other hand, the Fairmac Corp., owners of the project, appealed Lane's decision not to grant an increase on dormitory rooms. Lane has since entered private law practice.

Administrator Cogswell said he used the averaging method of determining rising costs of operation in arriving at his decision. He said the firm's operating costs and real estate taxes rose by $45,116 in 1947, as compared with the 1944-46 average. This figure included consideration of expenditures for refrigerators, ranges, shades and screens, amortized over a period of 10 years.

The Fairmac Corp. was represented by John J. Wilson and the apartment tenants by the law firm of Arnold, Fortas & Porter.

Lane's original decision was made in October after a two-day hearing on a request for a 10 per cent apartment rent boost and a $5-a-month hike in dormitory rents.

Carlyn Apartments Rent Rehearing Today

A rehearing on request for an 11.5 per cent increase on the rents of 116 of the 269 units in the Carlyn Apartments, 2500 Q st. nw., will be held today at 9:30 a. m. before Rent Examiner William F. Mansfield.

The rehearing was scheduled after the Ring Management Co., owners of the property, successfully appealed a 7.5 per cent rent increase decision to the Municipal Court of Appeals. The court reversed the award.

Present rents are from $55 to $145 a month. The original hearing was held on October 15 and the 7.5 per cent increase recommendation was made by Rent Examiner Denis K. Lane.

Deanwood Group Votes Approval Of D. C. Sales Tax

The Deanwood Civic Association last night went on record as favoring the proposed District sales tax at its meeting in the Carver School, Whittingham st. and Lane pl. ne.

The resolution stated that the act of the Federation of Civic Association's executive committee in opposing the sales "was not of our accord."

The group acted to support the request of property owners adjacent to 44th st. and Hunt pl. ne. for a raised highway and streetcar loading platform at the intersection, which it was contended fills with water after heavy rainfall.

Girl, 13, Changes Her Story On Sex Charges Against Man

A 13-year-old, curly-haired bobby-soxer in District Court yesterday switched the tale she told police and flatly denied any sexual affairs with an accused 53-year-old Washington builder.

The builder, Max Zipkin, 3119 18th st. ne., is on trial on charges of carnal knowledge and violation of the Mann Act by taking the girl across State lines to debauch her.

Informed by Assistant United States Attorney Arthur J. McLaughlin of the girl changing her story, Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut recessed court for the girl "to examine her conscience." When it resumed, he then lectured her on the seriousness of accusing any one falsely and bid her: "Now, tell us the truth."

Chewing gum nervously, her eyes glued to the floor, the girl repeated her denial that Zipkin had had intercourse with her and, when questioned by McLaughlin about her earlier statement, she declared: "I didn't know this was so serious. I didn't want to get anyone in trouble."

When the trial adjourned in the late afternoon to be resumed this morning, Judge Schweinhaut was hearing arguments from attorneys on whether sufficient evidence remained to permit the case to go to the jury.

The arguments centered on a three-day trip the girl said she took with Zipkin in December, 1947, to Atlantic City on which, she said, they stayed in a tourist cabin. She said yesterday they slept apart in twin beds, although Max Tatelman, operator of the tourist court, an earlier witness, said the cabin contained only a double bed.

Conviction on a carnal knowledge charge, involving the girl, could carry a death penalty.

At one point in yesterday's trial, McLaughlin asked the girl if she recalled telling him after the previous day's court session that "I will not see anybody get the chair," and asked, if the carnal knowledge charge were dropped, would she stick to her original story. Her reply was, "No."

A Gallinger Hospital surgical interne who examined the girl told the court the girl's physical condition was that of a woman long married.

The girl, wearing a full green coat and white ankle-length sox, was yesterday's first witness, and shortly after she took the stand McLaughlin began referring to her changing story.

Pressed for reason why she was changing it, at one point she broke into tears and cried: "What would you say if your mother and father told you to testify that he did it, or else everything will be taken away from you?"

Jury Acquits Engineer of Rape in Austin

Man, 39, Held Innocent Of U. S. Clerk's Charge In Montgomery Court

After one hour's deliberation last night, an all-male Montgomery County jury ruled that Paul Kratzmaier, 39, of 1420 21st st. nw., was innocent of raping a 31-year-old Government clerk.

The accusation of rape had been leveled by the clerk, a former Oklahoma school teacher. She said she was ravished by Kratzmaier in an Austin, a small British-made automobile, last December 12 in Chevy Chase.

The defendant freely admitted having relations with the woman on the night in question, but contended they were with her consent.

Miss Frances Malvina Fentress, 4433 Faraday pl. nw., an attractive brunette, 5-feet-7¾ inches tall and weighing 118 pounds, recounted details of the alleged assault which, she said, occurred less than three hours after she met the defendant at a dance at a 16th st. hotel.

Kratzmaier, identified as a St. Louis, Mo., engineer working here, is about 6 feet tall and weighs about 180 pounds.

Measurements and photographs of the pint-size car were introduced during the day-long trial.

Testifying as to measurements made of the car, police witnesses said, there was as much leg space in the auto as in a conventional car.

In final arguments, Assistant State's Attorney, Thomas M. Anderson, of Montgomery County, stated as proof of the roominess of the car that three persons could ride in the front seat.

The woman told the jury she accepted the defendant's offer to take her home from the dance in his car and then agreed to ride beyond her home in Northwest Washington to Chevy Chase so they could continue their "pleasant conversation."

She then related how, overcome with terror, she "blacked out" when Kratzmaier seized her and how, minutes later, she regained consciousness to find the unmarried engineer ravishing her in the front seat.

"I tried to cry out but couldn't because I was so terrified and I was unable to get my breath," she said.

A physician, Dr. L. Huntley Cate, who examined the woman several hours later, testified that the former school teacher, who has resided in Washington for about five years, had been a virgin before the alleged attack.

The woman, described by the prosecuting attorney as "the most truthful witness I have ever seen," said that Kratzmaier's only advance before seizing her was a kiss on the cheek.

Earlier that evening, a Saturday, he testified, "She danced in sensuous and suggestive manner and at no time during the evening were my advances resisted."

In fact, Kratzmaier testified, he was so surprised the following Tuesday when police picked him up that he at first denied having relations with the woman "out of chivalry."

When arrested, Kratzmaier said he was working in "automotive sales" for a Wisconsin ave. car dealer. He was living at Wesley Hall, 1420 21st st. nw., he declared.

He told the jurors that he parked the car about 1:15 a. m. in a dead-end street near the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Recreation Center and that a "necking party" preceded the incident.

Richberg Hits Paternalism At A. U. Fete

The American people are entitled to "a clear presentation of the profound issue between democratic liberalism and undemocratic paternalism," Donald R. Richberg said yesterday.

The lawyer and former chief of the NRA, speaking at American University's Founders Day, said that voters should be given "a simple choice between two parties, two candidates and two platforms that represent two distinct philosophies and forms of government that have been, and will be, eternally in conflict."

Instead, he said, they are asked "year after year to vote for incoherent and evasive candidates, running on incoherent and evasive platforms."

Anniversary of Charter Signing

Richberg spoke at a gathering of students, faculty and members of the board of trustees at Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church. The meeting marked the fifty-sixth anniversary of the signing of the university's charter. Dean John E. Bentley of the college of arts and sciences was given a scroll for completing 25 years as a member of the faculty.

Last night alumni were guests at a reception given at the campus residence of University President Paul F. Douglass. The celebration will continue tonight with a concert by the National Symphony Orchestra at 8:45 p. m. at Clendenen Hall.

Richberg, a trustee of the university, defined "liberals" as those "who believe in maintaining individual freedom by strengthening our powers of local self-government."

"Paternalists," he said, "believe in hastening social reforms by increasing the powers of the centralized, national government."

Warns of Police State

He warned that the "comprehensive welfare state," advocated by the paternalists who profess to be liberals, "must be a police state."

"Both party platforms in the 1948 campaign promised a paternalistic expansion of Federal powers that left liberal devotees of local self-government no clear choice between Truman and Dewey," Richberg said.

Speaking, he said, as a survivor of the "great insurgent campaigns of Theodore Roosevelt and Robert M. LaFollette" and "as a retired staff officer of the original New Deal," Richberg said that a coalition of Democrats and Republicans supporting the liberalism of local self-government could take over control of Congress within 100 days and might win a national election by a large majority.

"Only one thing would make this coalition impractical, the absence of vision, the principle and the courage that inspire and compel men of great responsibility to do great deeds in times of great emergency."

GSI Profits Cut to Loss By Contracts

Net Operating Income Of $18,578 Reported On $9,214,460 Gross

A profit of $18,578 realized by Government Services, Inc., during 1948 was turned into a $9817 loss because of income-sharing contracts, it was reported yesterday.

Herbert L. Willett, jr., secretary-treasurer of the corporation, announced that GSI's 44 cafeterias and 30 snack bars on Federal property grossed $9,214,460 last year.

The net operating income of $18,578 "was converted into a loss, as a result of payments totaling $28,395 made to the Federal Government and to departmental welfare agencies," Willett said.

The announcement said GSI cafeterias served 21,230,190 meals during the year, an average of more than 83,000 a day.

The Navy Department cafeteria had the largest volume of food sales, $829,478; the Navy Annex, second, with $537,979, and next, in order, the Interior Department, $468,312; Munitions Building, $423,391, and Arlington Farms, $387,019.

Willett said 29 of the 44 cafeterias operated at a loss, seven showing losses of $10,000 to $15,000 for the year.

Cost of food, he said, took up 50.89 per cent of the gross income; wages and related taxes and insurance, 40.25 per cent; cleanliness and sanitation, 3.54; new equipment, 3.02; utilities, 2.10, and payments to the Federal treasurer and to employe welfare funds, .3.

The average cost of a meal was placed at 33.8 cents. The peak employment by the cafeteria division and the GSI commissaries and warehouses was given as 1850.

Sentence of Owner for Theft Balks Effort to Close Boat

Efforts of Alexandria police to rid the city of a houseboat cited in a grand jury report last week were complicated yesterday when the boat's owner was sent to jail.

Louis Edwards, 37-year-old painter, who police said lives with his wife on a Potomac River houseboat just north of the intersection of Oronoco and North Union sts., received a 45-day sentence in Alexandria Police Court on a petty larceny charge for stealing lead from the nearby plant of the American Agricultural Chemical Co.

Police said, however, they will proceed with plans to close the boat as soon as possible and indicated the city will invoke the nuisance ordinance if necessary. Inspector Russell A. Hawes said police had ordered Edwards to vacate the boat before the grand jury report February 16 because of trouble there involving drinking and fights.

Police reported better luck with another houseboat on the north side of Hunting Creek near Rt. No. 1 which the jury also asked be closed or moved. The owner of that boat has indicated he will cooperate in getting rid of it, police said.

The picture of a boat at the foot of Queen st. printed in The Washington Post February 17 was not one of those which the grand jury asked be closed or moved. The foreman of the grand jury has since stated that the only houseboat referred to on the riverfront in the northern part of the city in the jury's special report of February 16 was the one owned by Edwards.

D. C. Budget Bill Action Slated for Wednesday

Committee Approval Expected to Meet Schedule; Proposed Sales Tax Studied

Edward Ryan
Post Reporter

House leaders yesterday slated floor action on the Washington budget bill for Wednesday, while a joint fund-raising subcommittee went to work anew on details of the proposed District sales tax.

The budget bill, while not yet cleared by the House Appropriations Committee, is expected to carry close to the 103 million dollars recommended by the District Commissioners for city expenses in the year starting July 1.

Representative Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.) in charge of the budget bill was out of town yesterday but is expected back Monday. He has previously indicated slight likelihood of major cuts in the budget.

Before reaching the floor, the District appropriation bill must first be cleared by the Bates subcommittee, then by the full House Appropriations Committee. Approval is expected by the time set.

Confer on Sales Tax

On the tax side, the Senate and House subcommittees in charge of District revenue met in executive session with Walter Kennedy, administrator of the Maryland sales tax law, to discuss details of how the District sales tax may be set up.

The fiscal subcommittees have agreed in principle on a 2 per cent general retail sales tax for the District, to make up the expected eight million dollar deficit in the budget as now written, and to help with other new revenue measures in financing the expected retroactive $330 pay boost for city employes.

Both Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.) and Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) chairmen of the Senate and House groups, indicated that the exemptions to be contained in the District sales levy would parallel as closely as possible those in the Maryland law.

Food, Medicine Exempted

This plan would place food for home consumption and medicine among the major exemptions.

The two subcommittees will meet again at 2 p. m. today in the Senate District committee room at the Capitol to hear testimony on how the proposed sales tax should treat gas and electric service and coal and fuel oil.

As now drafted, the sales tax bill would exempt gas and electric service while taxing fuel oil and coal. A reason for this proposal is that the gas and electric service are now subject to a four per cent District gross receipts tax. Spokesmen for the coal and fuel oil industries in Washington protested the exemption for the gas and electric service if their own products are to be taxed.

Officials of the Washington Gas Light Co., Potomac Electric Power Co., and of the fuel oil and coal businesses are expected to attend today's meeting.

Teachers' Pay Discussed

Meanwhile, the House Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee reviewed with District school officials the question of how teachers should be treated in the proposed retroactive pay increase bill.

The meeting ended without formal action, but with renewed indications that teachers still have a chance to be placed on a par with other District employes in the pay bills.

An earlier decision by the fiscal group and two other House District Subcommittees, those in charge of educational and police matters, was that teachers should be given a $200 pay boost while police and firemen would get $330, all retroactive to last July when the $330 raise went to Federal employes.

Members indicated the decision on the $200 or $330 figure would probably be left finally to the House District Committee when that group acts on the pay bill.

Dorchester House Fire Kills Woman

Mrs. John Hite Gooch, 69, wife of the general agent of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, was burned to death about noon yesterday in an armchair in her seventh-floor apartment at the Dorchester House.

Mrs. Gooch, who was alone, was apparently dead in the flaming chair near the living room window of her apartment, No. 706, when firemen arrived. They tossed the overstuffed chair from an open window to a patio seven flights below where the flames were extinguished.

An alarm was sounded throughout the fashionable apartment house at 2480 16th st. about 11:45 a. m., bringing residents into the halls. Heavy smoke, which poured through the seventh-floor halls, drove occupants to lower floors, but few persons fled the building.

An autopsy was performed late yesterday by Deputy Coroner Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, who said Mrs. Gooch died from "universal burns."

Dr. Murphy said he found carbon monoxide in her blood and that both the right and left sides of her body were severely burned. No burns were found on her back, however, the doctor said. He withheld a death certificate, pending further investigation by Homicide Squad detectives and the fire marshal's office.

Additional chemical tests will be made of the woman's blood and lungs to determine the concentration of carbon monoxide. Police said they were puzzled that Mrs. Gooch had not gotten out of the chair when the flames touched her. Possible explanation, they said, was that she had been knocked out by carbon monoxide gas from the smoke while asleep and hence did not feel the flames.

The fire was virtually confined to the armchair in which Mrs. Gooch was sitting, according to Detective Sergt. John L. Sullivan. It charred a patch less than two feet square in the floor of the living room, and merely scorched an adjacent wall and the ceiling.

Alone In Apartment

Sullivan said Mrs. Gooch had been alone in the apartment since 9 a. m., but was all right at 10 a. m., when she received a phone call from her daughter, Mrs. Mary Jane Hesser.

Part of the burned armchair had a cigarette hole in it, according to Sullivan. He said a stool near the chair contained cigarettes, a lighter and a holder.

MRS. JOHN H. GOOCH
Dies in burning chair

The apartment house engineer called firemen after two men, moving furniture out of another seventh floor apartment, reported smoke oozing from under the door of 706.

Mrs. Gooch was pronounced dead at 12:55 p. m. by Dr. Richard Rosenberg, District coroner. She was identified by two daughters, Miss Eleanor Gooch ahd Mrs. Mary Jane Hesser, who share the apartment with their parents.

Mrs. Gooch, the former Mary Armstrong, was born in Tyrone, Ky. She attended schools in Frankfort, Ky., and was married in 1912. She lived in Georgia, Texas, Arkansas and California before moving to Washington in 1941. She was a member of the Di Ma Va. club for wives of District Traffic Club members.

Besides her husband and two daughters, Mrs. Gooch leaves a third daughter, Mrs. Roy F. Hebard, Glen Ellyn, Ill., and a son, John H. Gooch, jr., Dallas, Tex.

N. Y. Man Fined $50 For Beating Woman

A New York man was fined $50 in Municipal Court Wednesday after pleading guilty to a charge of assaulting a woman employe at the Thomas Circle Restaurant.

He was Tony Laurich, 50, of Jamaica, Long Island, N. Y., charged with beating Ruth Ensor, 34, of 1223 12th st. nw., about 1 a. m. Wednesday.

Detective Sergt. John T. McCarthy of the general assignment squad stated in court papers that he witnessed the incident. He said in the papers that the woman had told him that Laurich had previously threatened her with a knife and "she was afraid of him."

Driver Fined $15

Frank E. McCord, 43, of 20 Quincy st. nw., was fined $15 in Municipal Court yesterday on a charge of driving on the wrong side of the street. His car collided with the car of Representative Frank B. Keefe (R., Wis.).

Keefe testified that on February 15, while he was driving south on 17th st. nw. near Euclid st., he saw McCord's car come weaving in the opposite direction. He pulled his car over to the curb but it was struck by McCord's car, he said.

McCord also faces a jury trial March 7 on a charge of drunken driving, growing out of the same accident.

Held in Apparel Theft

John Wright, 18, of 1622 Howisan pl. sw., yesterday was ordered for grand jury action, charged with the larceny of $92 in ladies wearing apparel, shoes and belts.

United States Commissioner Cyril Lawrence set bond at $1500. Police said Wright took the articles of clothing, the property of the Rev. John R. West, pastor of the Church of God, 670 D st. se., away in a push cart, which he rented, and sold most of them for rags.

Held on Girl's Charge

Milton Turner Johnson, 34, of 600 Harvard st. nw., was ordered held under $3500 bond by United States Commissioner Cyril Lawrence for grand jury action yesterday on a charge of attempting to take indecent liberties with a 6-year-old girl.

The offense allegedly took place February 21. Hospitalization was recommended for Johnson at the hearing yesterday.

120 Employes Give Blood

More than 120 District employes have donated a pint of blood each to the Red Cross in the city government's blood program, John W. Traumburg, chairman, reported yesterday.

Tramburg, who is director of public welfare, said the present goal is eight donors a week.

Restaurateur Fined $75

George Skouzes, co-owner of the Oyster Bay Restaurant, 904 9th st. nw., was fined $75 yesterday by Municipal Court Judge John P. McMahon for violations of the District's Eight-Hour-Day Law for Women.

Skouzes pleaded not guilty to three counts of failure to keep daily time records showing the hours of beginning and stopping work, the time for meals and the total daily and weekly hours worked.

To his argument that he expected his bookkeeper to keep the proper records, the court pointed out it is the owner's responsibility.

Detroit Police Postpone Action On Press Cards

Detroit, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Police Commissioner Harry S. Toy said today he will not bar newsmen who refuse to sign non-Communist affidavits from police headquarters until a newspaper editors' committee acts.

Toy earlier issued a brief order which was interpreted as denying access to headquarters to reporters and photographers who had failed to sign the declarations.

Instructions were sent out to post armed watchmen at entrances to turn back all persons who failed to register. Newsmen were instructed to "register their press cards." They overwhelmingly had ignored Toy's earlier order to sign the affidavits in order to receive a police press card.

Toy explained later, however, that 1948 press cards will be accepted until after the American Society of Newspaper Editors meets.

He said he would consider recommendations of the society's freedom of information committee before deciding whether to insist on the non-Communist pledge.

Directors of the company, making their annual inspection tour, saw Mrs. Clement E. Conger of Alexandria, Va., daughter of EBC President John Jay Hopkins, make the first weld for the Trigger.

The new sub, when completed, will be the first of a quartet the company has contracts to build in a new program, and is the first undersea craft to be started here in nearly four years.

Navy Will Bar Reservists From Cuba's Gay Spots

By The Associated Press

The Navy's high command last night banned any cuddling of senoritas or rum gargling in Cuba's famous fun spots by the 35,000 reservists on a Caribbean training cruise.

The part-time sailors will take their fun where they can find it at the Guantanamo Bay Naval Base or on tours of Guantanamo City in cooperation with the Cuban government, the Navy said firmly.

Crossed off for visiting when the reservists wind up their cruise next month were such attraction centers as Havana, San Diego and the native city of Caimanera. Caimanera is famous throughout the fleet for its gaiety.

Adm. Louis E. Denfield, Chief of Naval Operations, said "we want the men of the fleet to become acquainted with the people of our sister republic under the most favorable conditions to both visitors and hosts."

Builders See Big Problems Now Solved

By Conrad P. Harness
Post Reporter

Chicago, Feb. 24.—Washington delegates to the convention of the National Association of Home Builders were en route home today after six days of discussing methods and developing plans for construction of more homes of better design and lower cost.

All agreed that builders must immediately start construction of a larger percentage of lower-priced homes than last year if the building industry expects to stay in good graces of the public.

This reporter has talked with builders from every State. The vast majority report that nearly every problem facing them in actual construction of a house has been solved. A plentiful supply of materials is available, except in isolated cases; workmen are giving a higher productivity for a day's wage than a year ago; and there is a large unfilled demand for housing.

Financing is still the biggest obstacle to home ownership, builders say. William S. Banks, president, Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, hopes Congress will liberalize mortgage insurance policies of the Federal Housing Administration to allow longer term amortization.

Rodney M. Lockwood, of Detroit, new president of the association, warned that the public should not expect an appreciable decline in building costs. He said the only way to force a substantial drop in housing prices is through a depression.

Officials and directors of the association outlined the group's policy for 1949, which every member and local charter is expected to follow.

It called for continued opposition to Government building of homes for low-wage earners, Government cooperation with private builders in efforts to clear slums and a pledge to build more "economy" homes. The latter would sell for less than $8500 in Washington.

The policy declaration also asked for a larger budget for FHA operations, legislation permitting higher mortgage loan insurance on small homes by FHA and establishment of a Government secondary mortgage market to purchase mortgages already held by leading institutions, thereby giving these groups added funds to finance more housing.

1949 Dodge Models on Display

NEW STYLING—Three new lines are included in the 1949 Dodges, now on display. The Coronet (pictured above) and the Meadowbrook are on 123½-inch wheelbase. The smaller, 115-inch wheelbase models are called Wayfarers. Dodge describes the new models as providing more headroom, more leg and elbow space, yet they are lower and narrower than previous models. Front and rear seats have been moved forward to permit better cradling between the axles. Price tags average $22 to $122 higher

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 24 (AP).—A firm market for cash corn gave most futures of that cereal a boost on the Board of Trade today. Otherwise, grains showed a nervous and slightly lower trend, even the December corn delivery slipping a bit.

In general, May contracts of all cereals had a better undertone than deferred futures. This was partly accounted for by the firm trend of cash prices, dealers said. Easiness in other contracts was based on uncertainty concerning price trends later this year.

2 Senators Charge Scheme To Force Nation Into ITO

By The Associated Press

Two key Republican Senators yesterday accused the State Department of trying to win indirect congressional approval of the International Trade Organization treaty through extension of the reciprocal trade program.

Senator Millikin (Colo.), former chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said State Department action "reeks with bad faith."

Senator Taft (Ohio) asked if Congress was "approving ITO by approving this?"

He referred to the proposed extension to June, 1951, of presidential authority to cut import tariffs as much as 50 per cent in making agreements with other nations to reduce trade barriers.

Winthrop G. Brown, testifying for the State Department, answered that the department has no motive or intention of getting ITO approval "in an underhanded way." Brown is director of the department's office of international trade policies.

The ITO agreement was signed in Havana, Cuba, last March by representatives of this country and 57 other nations. Under United Nations sponsorship, it proposes a global pattern for removing trade barriers and stimulating world trade.

Taft said ITO and the trade agreements deal with the same thing and asked "why isn't the ITO before us now?"

Brown replied:

"I can't say why the President has not sent it up—of course it's much more complicated and complex."

Chairman George (D., Ga.) interposed that ITO should reach Congress "in several weeks."

Earlier in the hearing Republican Senators disagreed sharply over the ends to be sough in the reciprocal trade program.

Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) said it was "just plain silly" for the United States to be sending large amounts of goods and investments overseas without being paid for them.

"We must swap the things we make best for the things that other nations make best," he told the Senate Finance Committee.

Court Upholds $175,000 Fine Against A & P

Chicago, Feb. 24 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of appeals today unanimously upheld the conviction of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. and 24 officers and subsidiary companies on antitrust charges.

The three-judge court held that the huge A. & P. food chain and its officers and subsidiaries had conspired to restrain and monopolize trade in violation of sections one and two of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

The 18-page opinion was written by Judge Sherman Minton. The case originally was heard in Danville, Ill., in 1946. Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley of Danville fined the defendants a total of $175,000 after hearing 22 weeks of technical testimony on A. & P. operations.

The decision was appealed in October, 1946.

In addition to antitrust violation, the defendants had been found guilty of illegally favoring certain individuals and companies in business transactions.

Williams Becomes First $100,000 Ball Player

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

(Brooklyn Dodgers add eleventh Negro player to their organization by signing Shortstop James Pendleton of the Chicago Giants.—News item.)

BRANCH RICKEY, who braved the wrath of prejudiced club owners in organized ball by bringing Jackie Robinson up to the Dodgers, now must be recognized as the great emancipator of the colored ball players.

POVICH

In the three years since Rickey's initial act to bring Negroes into organized ball, no fewer than 20 colored players have been signed by big league clubs or their farm teams. The Indians, Yankees, Giants, Browns and Braves have joined the Dodgers in giving the colored players a break.

Rickey is still the most avid seeker of Negro talent, and that is natural enough because of the success of Robinson who was the best player on the Brooklyn club last season. But the new estate of the colored player is indicated by the fact that the Yankees and Indians are now battling in Commissioner Chandler's office for the disputed rights to Artie Wilson, of a Birmingham Negro team.

THE EFFECTS of Rickey's daring in inducting Robinson into organized ball were two-pronged. They broke down the racial barriers in the national game and raised the Negroes' own leage to new importance in baseball.

Little heed was paid to the Negro leagues heretofore except by Negro fans. Others weren't much interested because there was no chance that they'd ever see the colored stars in the majors And in the colored leagues there was little incentive to make good—they were never going to get a shot at the majors.

To enlist the interest of white fans, the colored teams took to clowning. Until recent years, their baseball was highly tinctured with show business. Satchel Page was half clown, half pitcher, and was paid on that basis. There was little with which to gauge the the abilities of the colored players, except in occasional games with All-Star barnstorming teams of big leagues.

IT'S DIFFERENT NOW, though. In the case of Artie Wilson, right-handed hitting shortstop who Bill Veeck stole from under the nose of the Yankees, Veeck's scouts were attracted by his hitting average which topped the Negro American League. Negro baseball was becoming recognized as pretty good baseball and a guy who could hit that much might fit in nicely with a big league club.

In the case of Rickey's latest acquisition, the fact that Pendleton hit .340 in the Negro American League was also significant. With the barriers down, and a place in organized ball awaiting the players who could make good, colored ball was better ball; its players had a chance to go somewhere, and the caliber improved. A .340 batting average was meaningful.

Everybody knew Satchel Paige was a great pitcher, Joe DiMaggio described him as "the best pitcher I ever faced," several years ago. But until Robinson made good so spectacularly and Larry Doby came along to hit .300 in the majors, the club owners were always dubious of the caliber of the colored performers.

ONLY THREE of the colored boys have made good in the majors thus far—Robinson, Doby and Paige—but that is a terrific percentage considering the fact that only seven were brought up before the 1948 season closed.

And Baseball Commissioner Chandler has put a new face on the colored leagues with his ukase that they are not to be raided ruthlessly for talent. Chandler has warned all clubs that they must deal for the colored stars through regular channels, buying their contracts from the Negro clubs, not snatching them without a mutually agreeable purchase price.

That's the paradox, though. When Rickey took Jackie Robinson away from the Kansas City Monarchs, it was without so much as an if-you-please. He didn't give the colored club a farthing for him. That wasn't nice, but in the light of the after-effects, the colored fans and players can hardly find it in their hearts to fault Mr. Rickey on any count.

Pillen Beats Cooper in Army Meet

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Sergt. Leland Pillen, a Third Army paratrooper from Ft. Bragg, N. C., ended an epidemic of favorites-who-fizzled last night at Ft. Myer as he battled his way into the semifinals of the world-wide Army boxing tournament.

Pillen, a bony welterweight Golden Gloves champion, needed all his ring wiles for a decision over Archie Cooper, a terrifically willing youngster from Litchfield Park, Ariz. But his victory margin was clear-cut.

The bout, one of 10 marking the fourth night of the service slugfest, featured action before some 6000 fans at the Riding Hall.

It was boxer (Pillen) versus slugger (Cooper) from the start. And though the rangy Pillen, winning his fifty-third bout in 60 outings, stabbed his shorter opponent from bell to bell the crowd was convinced Cooper was never more than one solid punch away from a knockout victory.

Pillen's triumph was the ninth straight hung up by Third Army scrappers in the meet. The tenth came one bout later as the only District of Columbia native on the card, Lawrence Jones of 442 6½ st. sw., made quick work of the fourth Army's Elfigo Bordeau.

Bordeau ran into one flurry of Jones' fists and was counted out at 1:19 of the first round.

The evening's fistics came to a violent close. Heavyweight Bob Graves, a showboat from Kewannee, Ill., doing duty in Washington, played around for one round and then knocked out the Fifth Army's Bennie Britt after 36 seconds of the second round.

It was Graves' eleventh straight victory and the ninth knockout of his brief boxing career.

Tonight's semifinals, starting at 8 p. m., will be highlighted by the welterweight scrap in which Pillen, last night's sensational winner, comes up against Joe Murphy, classy victor over Washington's Andy Nathan in Wednesday's matches. Sixteen bouts are scheduled.

Gonzaga Wins, Ties St. John's For Title

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Gonzaga's Eagles turned back a last-minute St. John's rally to upset the Cadets, 38-37, last night at College Park, and throw the race for the Catholic High League leadership into a tie.

Mike Nolan and Tippy Larkins paced the Eagles to their seventh league win in eight starts. They scored 12 and 11 points to help reverse an early season St. John's win over Gonzaga.

Gonzaga and St. John's meet in a rubber game March 9 at College Park to decide the league title.

Lead Changes 14 Times

The lead changed hands 14 times in the wild contest, and was tied three times in the fourth period alone. In the end, field goals by Nolan and Tom Smith and a foul shot by Johnny Hogan iced the game for Gonzaga. They gave the Eagles a 38-35 lead, which absorbed Joe Cardaci's wild one-hander with 18 seconds left.

St. John's Coach Joe Gallagher announced in the second quarter that his team was playing the game under protest when officials ruled a field goal by Larkins good.

Just before, there had been a wild skirmish under the Gonzaga basket. Larkins emerged with the ball. Somewhere in the coliseum, among the 2000 spectators or on the court, a whistle blew. The Cadets dropped their arms, and Larkins let go with a perfect set shot.

St. John's Withdraws Protest

Officials ruled the basket good. Gallagher protested that Referee Toby Taylor blew his whitsle. Taylor said the whistle had come from the stands.

After the game, Gallagher huddled with Brother Clement, St. John's principal, and the two decided to withdraw the protest.

Larkins, a nimble 6 foot 1 inch veteran of Gonzaga's Catholic championship football team, played the best game for the Eagles, holding St. John's top pointmaker, Dan Kokes, to 5 points.

Kokes had a fleeting chance to be the hero with three seconds left when Gonzaga's freeze misfired. St. John's took the ball out of bounds, and set up Kokes, who let go with a looper from mid-court. It was a little too hard, rebounding off the backboard as the final gun sounded.

Joe Cardaci sank six field goals and three foul shots for 15 points, high for the game. Twice his baskets put St. John's in the lead, and twice more they tied the score.

St. John's beat Gonzaga, 44-33, in the Jayvee preliminary.

1949 Pact Reportedly Calls for Record Pay

Boston, Feb. 24 (AP).—Slugger Ted Williams' oft-intimated ambition to become baseball's first $100,000 player appeared fulfilled tonight when he advised General Manager Joe Cronin he would sign his 1949 Red Sox contract on arrival at the Sarasota training camp on March 6.

"I've just had a phone call from Ted in Everglades City, Fla., during which he told me he was very happy about his contract and would sign up when he reports about two weeks hence," Cronin said.

Cronin refused to divulge Williams' new salary terms and sidestepped neatly when asked if the American League's .365-hitter had been promised more than the reported $80,000 he received last season.

"Ted told me he was very happy about his new contract and that he and his family were in excellent health," Owner Tom Yawkey's front office boss replied between chuckles.

Bonus Clause This Time

It has been the Red Sox policy to refrain from publicizing player salaries and Williams always has adhered to it.

But recently, when Joe DiMaggio's new salary was estimated at $90,000 and Lou Boudreau's from $65,000 to $75,000, Williams interrupted his fishing long enough to explain to Boston friends why he had not come to terms.

"I've never had any financial disagreements with the Red Sox," Williams said. "The only reason I haven't signed is because there are a few minor technicalities I want straightened out."

The "technicalities" were thought to be bonus clauses based on attendance, a factor that never seemed important to Williams in the past.

DiMag, Spence Not In

Cronin appeared to substantiate the widely circulated Williams "hundred grand" rumors with the explanation it is "the best contract Ted ever has had."

With Williams, who never has been regarded as a holdout, in the fold, Cronin now has only three more players to dicker with, Outfielders Dom DiMaggio and Stan Spence and Southpaw John (Windy) McCall, who was called up from the Louisville farm club late last season affer compiling a 9-12 record.

DiMaggio, who paid several fruitless visits to Fenway Park last month, when he came on from San Francisco to visit his Wellesley in-laws, is reported to have asked for a $5000 boost over his $30,000 figure for last season.

Candini Signs With Nats, Heads For TrainingCamp

Milo (Boo.n Boom) Candini, Nats relief pitcher, yesterday accepted terms for 1949.

Candini, who won two and lost three last season, forwarded his signed contract from his Manteca, Calif., home and immediately headed for Orlando, Fla., where the Nats open spring drills Monday.

With the 32-year-old Candini in the fold, only Pitchers Ray Scarborough, Mickey Haefner and Walter Masterson and Catcher Al Evans are unsigned.

Paul Brown's 461 Ties Season Record; 179 Sets Game Mark

Honor of setting the pace in the third annual Washington Post Bowling Tournament for Clarendon Bowling Center duckpinners goes to Paul Brown, smooth-rolling star of the Buckingham Florists. Shooting in the fast Clarendon Major League, Brown scored a 410-51—461 to match Elwood Deans 461 for a new season's high record and also set a new mark of 179 for high game.

Before The Post tournament, staged for the benefit of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, ends next week, Brown hopes to better this mark.

All-out support for the tournament has come from the Blessed Sacrament Church League rolling at Bethesda Bowling Center. In the ladies' division Zell Layton showed the way with 331-75—406, while in the men's league Jacques Abadie, jr., was tops with 368-96—464.

Over at Brookland, where the field of entries has stretched to 550, Toni Vagnoni of the Roseto Club tallied at 358-78—436.

Clarendon also reported a 360-84—444 for Finn G. Olsen of the Patent Office League; 349-84—433 for T. B. Chase of the Arlington Church League.

Members of the Men's Major District League have entered the event. "Whip" Litchfield of Winchester Packard tried his hand at Greenway and fired a 396-27—423.

Walter Carter of American Trucking Association League, with 325-105—457, led the Kalorama bowlers as Manager McCarty reported his entries soaring past the 500 mark.

Nick Smyrna's 415-57—472 and Theodore Chaconas' 378-66—444 in the Ahepa League were the latest of the top scorers at Penn Recreation, where the field is past the 700 point.

Leaders at Lafayette include Logan Jeffries, 392-72—464, and Donald Shelton, 352-93—445, both of the Scott League, and Jack Crowd, 374-66—440, of the Hecht Company League.

Navy Still Weighs Shift

Philadelphia, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Mayor Bernard Samuel said today that Army and Navy Academy officials want to play their 1949 football game in Philadelphia, but that the Navy Department is considering other cities.

However, both the Army and Navy Departments in Washington agreed that Army is the host team and must choose the site. The Army Department said any announcement must come from West Point. At West Point, N. Y., a Military Academy spokesman said. "We won't have the whole say, but we will have a lot to say about where the game will be played."

At the Navy Department, it was said that "the Army-Navy game survey has not been completed . . . when a decision is made, it will be announced simultaneously by the two academies."

Terps Romp; Tourney Berth Seems Certain

Richmond, Va., Feb. 24.—Maryland avenged a previous loss to Richmond here tonight, 66-51, and practically assured itself of a Southern Conference tournament berth.

The Terps, who now have a 7-6 league record, got off to a 38-16 halftime lead and never were headed despite being blanked from the floor for the first eight minutes of the second half.

Maryland's victory evened the two-game series with the Spiders. At College Park before Christmas, Richmond outscored the Terps, 54-45.

Bernie Smith paced Maryland's scorers with 12 points and he was followed closely by Spence Wright and Lee Brawley, who each tallied 11.

Three men took care of the bulk of the losers' total, too. Bob Shaw notched 13 points and Wes Brown and Elmo Stephenson each 12.

Mexican Disqualifies Self

Douglas Has 63 to Lead In Rio Grande Open Golf

By Claude Ramsey

Harlingen, Tex., Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Davoe Douglas, Delaware's gift to golfdom, blazed an 8-under-par 63 today to take the first-round lead in the $10,000 Rio Grande Valley Open tournament.

But Young Tony Holquin, winner of the $5000 Mexican Open, yesterday took the spotlight away from Douglas when he arbitrarily disqualified himself from the tournament after finding an error in his card.

Holquin, who defeated such American "name" golfers as Jimmy Demaret, Lloyd Mangrum and Sammy Snead, in the Mexico City tourney, withdrew from competition today over protests of fellow golfers and sponsors of the tournament.

He posted a 4 on his card at the twelfth hole, but after his card had been signed by the other two golfers in his threesome, and posted on the official PGA board, he told Scorekeeper Charlie Kimmel he had shot a 5 on that hole.

George Schneiter, PGA tournament chairman, was called back to the Harlingen Country Club course from his hotel, to rule on the error.

Because Holquin had shown great sportsmanship in voluntarily admitting his error, Schneiter offered the 22-year-old hopeful from Guadalajara a hearing before a PGA rules board.

But Holquin said he expected no "special privileges" and Schneiter said he had no choice but to disqualify him.

Tied for second place were Al Smith of Winston-Salem, N. C.; Henry Ransom of St. Andrews, Ill., and Bob Hamilton of Landover, Md., with 67s.

Sammy Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., virtually shot himself out of the tournament with a 3 over par 74. Lew Worsham got a 71, George Fazio of Conshohocken, Pa., also had a 71.

Auerbach Explains Today's High Scoring—Sky-Scraping Players Are Nearer Baskets

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

CAP COACH Red Auerbach offers this explanation for the prolific scoring in college and pro basketball: "The players are closer to the basket. The basket is still 10 feet from the floor, same as it's been for years, but today's basketball players are taller . . . Several years ago a 6-foot 6-inch player was considered a freak. Today you've got to have at least three of them to win in fast company" . . . Ted Mann, able, affable Duke University sports publicity director, has been named president of the Class B Carolina Baseball League. In addition to providing him with something to do in the summer months, it also gives him $3600 more to lose playing golf . . . You could say that the Nats are internationalists. There's Eddie Robinson from Paris (Tex.), Dick Weik from Waterloo (Iowa) and Larry Kelchner from Bethlehem (Pa.)

BECAUSE PROVIDENCE is closer to New Haven than Boston, Tony Lavelli, Yale's great basketball star, will probably play pro ball with the Rollers although the Celtics are prepared to go the limit to get his services . . . Under BAA draft rules, the team closest to the college has first pluckings and Providence is 47 miles closer to New Haven than Boston . . . If Lavelli flunks out as a pro player, he can always make it as a musician. He's an accomplished accordionist . . . Brown Alumni of Washington fete Bob Margarita, new Georgetown football coach and his assistant, Bill Battles, Monday at the Army-Navy Club . . . Jerry Priddy is asking the Browns for $20,000 to play second base this year and if he gets it he can thank the Nats, who traded him to the Browns last year. Priddy hit over .600 against the Griffs while compiling his .296 batting average in 1948. . . .

ALTHOUGH HE was an all-Stater in high school, Billy Conn isn't allowed to go out for basketball at Georgetown because he may get hurt and be lost to the football team. So the hula-hipped halfback cast his lot with an Hoya intramural team and is burning up the league . . . George Barclay, who left Maryland to become head football coach at Washington and Lee, didn't intend to report for his new assignment until March 1, but the loss of two key players, who "transferred" to Miss. State, made him change his mind. He's in Lexington now, standing by for spring training and guarding his squad against further raids . . . Bill Meek, Maryland's backfield coach, has a new job these days: seeing that Ed Modzelewski doesn't ride in autos. The Terp freshman halfback sensation and several friends overturned in a car returning from Pittsburgh . . . Only the car was injured, but the Maryland coaching staff suffered acute nervousness until they learned "Mighty Mo" was shipshape. . . .

Good 'Return' . . .

Haight Gives His Blessing To Race Movie

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

PERHAPS IT COULDN'T happen elsewhere but with its race track background, there's nothing impossible about the movie, "The Return of October," currently showing at the National.

Hollywood comes up with a new twist and, as usual, wrings it for a fare-the-well, but in doing so gives with a picture that won't win an Academy Award but should provide laughs unlimited.

Knowing the gullibility of turf people—that goes for regular and occasional fans as well as the horsey set behind the scenes—I have to disagree with one critic who writes that situations as deplicted in "The Return of October" are unlikely to happen.

Perhaps that is true of some of the hokus-pokus attached to the film for the edification of the never-saw-a-race customers. But, for my money, the turf angles ring true and anything added can be taken care of under comedy license.

The picture's gimmick is reincarnation.

A gal's Uncle Billie, a horseman with a not unusual "I'm going to win a Derby complex," does not before saying that if he comes back it will be as a horse. His niece believes she spots the spirit of Uncle Billie in the person of October, a horse she buys at auction.

THIS THOUGHT spreads through the picture until, at the finish, almost everybody watching the Kentucky Derby believes, if only temporarily, as she does.

Track crowds are like that. For instance, in 1942 Shutout won the Kentucky Derby with Alsab second. On the following Friday, with the Preakness coming up the next day, a Baltimore businessman made a sizable bet that Alsab, despite his Derby defeat, would be the favorite, not only over his conquerer, Shutout, but over the entire field.

He set out to deliberately make Alsab the public choice. He had thousands of cards printed reading, "Alsab Will Win Today" and distributed them througout downtown Baltimore and to almost every person who came to the Preakness.

What happened? Despite the fact that almost without exception handicappers and line-makers made Shutout the favorite, Alsab won the distinction by a few cents—enough to win the bet. Incidentally Alsab won the race.

Maybe the movie's director had his tongue in his cheek when he used a novel to insure a horse losing a race. The steed was moving to the front when a boy in the stands sailed out a paper airplane. Seeing this, the horse shied and lost.

Not impossible. Horses often bolt to the outside or pull themselves up when unexpectedly seeing a bit of wind-blown paper.

This reminds me that some years ago our photographer, Hugh Miller, took the finish of each race in Maryland which we printed in strips along with the charts of the various events.

One day, after printing a film, Miller looked closely and there, plain as day, was a boy near the rail with a rubber band, extended in slingshot fashion, aimed at the back of one of the horses battling into the wire. Could be that this youngster's shot changed the result of the race as did his movie counterpart.

In the picture, Terry Moore, the heroine, buys a radio for her horse. Nothing new to that. Many normally fractious horses change under the spell of the air waves, although I never heard of one preferring a certain program.

I thought Miss Moore did a good job. Her role was that of a crazy-over-horse type, well-known in racing and hunting circles, who bounce around in a ort of "I swallowed a lively ball" fashion.

THE TECHNICOLOR was swell, adherence to turf detail better than usual and meshing of the movie Derby into the real running of a Kentucky Classic was excellent. By the way, could it have been the one Laurin won?

All in all, it's a show worth seeing.

My record as a theater critic is .000.

At the same National Theater, it was, that I was called on for some technical advice on the stage show, "Three Men On a Horse," which was in rehearsal. The director asked me to check on the track slang, odds, horses' names, etc.

I made some suggestions. One was the insertion of the plater named "Brass Monkey" into the script, always good for a laugh on a cold winter night.

After seeing the show four times in rehearsal, I returned to the office. Friend Povich asked, "What do you think of the play?"

Batcheller Boots Home 3 Winners

Hialeah, Fla., Feb. 24 (AP).—Earning her fourth triumph in six Florida tries this winter, Irisen routed five other sprinters in today's Vista Del Mar purse.

The day's riding honors went to Apprentice Jockey Logan Batcheller who piloted three winners. He took the third with White Hawk at $11.20; the fourth with My Star at $11.40 and the eighth with Chips Down at $11.30.

Apprentice Nelson was shaken up by a spill from One Broke while at the post for the third race and, although he rode the horse, took the remainder of the day off.

Flying the Baltimore silks of Mrs. Otts L. Nyberg, Irisen flashed past the wire a three-lengths winner to reward the talent at the rate of $5.90 for $2. Erigeron, from the Grandview Stables, was a lightly backed second, beating John Barry Ryan's Pipette by two lengths for that award.

Miss Mommy Fails

Back of the payoff trio came Miss Mommy, lone starter eligible for the $20,000 added, mile and a furlong Black Helen Handicap; Phar Mon and Coyote.

For the first time at the 34-day-old meeting, the racing strip was not fast. Rain, almost a total stranger for weeks, fell overnight and this morning, leaving the track slow. Despite that fact, Irisen found it an easy matter to run the six furlongs distance in 1:11 4/5.

Sunshine reappeared during the afternoon for the 17,683 fans.

Erigeron gave every indication he might pull an upset when he dashed into a lead of more than a length in the first quarter mile. Irisen was nearest on the trail and under light wraps, with Pipette and Miss Mommy following as named.

Irisen Moves Up

Still a length on top after a half mile, Erigerton finally was joined by Irisen when they straightened for the run to the wire. The fancied mare, whose only poor effort in a long time was her most recent race here, soon bounded ahead as if much the best. The mare had scored two straight victories prior to her recent setback.

Pipette, well backed, did not run out on the stretch turn as she had when fourth in the recent Columbiana Handicap, but she was unable to wear down the surprising Erigeron for the place. Miss Mommy, adding nothing to her status for the Black Helen of next Wednesday, was well placed most of the journey. She simply failed to respond to Ted Atkinson's urging through the final furlong.

Boys Who Run in Panties Give Old School Try in IC4-A Games

46 Schools Seek Championship

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, Feb. 24 (NYHT). This is the week when those characters who have been running in circles all winter in the armories and arenas of the Nation do it for the dear old school. Instead of for the pure joy of going out nights in their underwear.

On the new Madison Square Garden track Saturday night delegates from 46 colleges will compete in the I.C.4-A championships, the most elderly of American track carnivals outdoors—it dates from 1875—but a mere stripling of 28 as a hothouse enterprise.

There is more than a superficial difference between the I.C.4-A games and other lingerie exhibits of the winter season. With the exception of last week's AAU championships, the others are privately sponsored meets, run by department stores or lodges or newspapers, as invitational affairs with handpicked fields. This is open competition among undergraduates, and primarily a team struggle rather than a case of single combat.

It is the indoor track version of the old school try. Nobody surrenders in the stretch here, because fifth place is worth a point in the team's score, and one point could easily mean the championship for Siwash.

Individual stars will emerge from the meet, of course, but it is not the individual performer who draws the crowd or stirs the witnesses. The loudest cheers in the Garden tomorrow will come from the group of old Blues in Section A, or the mob of vintage Crimsons across the hall, howling for guys whose names may be unfamiliar, but whose colors are right.

For frequenters of this Taj Mahal of sport it is an experience to hear somebody shout, "Come on Penn!" instead of "Throw the bums out!"

Because it is open competition, it frequently is the case that this is the meet where rookies rush from obscurity into national distinction. You need an established reputation to get into the invitational shows. You need only make your college team to gain a chance for the big splurge here.

It happens that young Bob Hayes of Connell grabbed himself a mess of headlines last week by winning the 1000-yard run in the AAU games. As a result, he'll probably go away as favorite tomorrow. But he hadn't been invited to any of the all-star shows before that; except for his victory last week he would be going into this race as a comparative unknown.

His opposition, incidentally, will include Seton Hall's Phil Thigpen, who was disqualified in the AAU race for his elbows-across-the-sea policy on the gun lap. Officials ruled that he had nudged Marcel Hansenne of France in a style not provided for under the Marshall Plan.

There have been some fairly bitter arguments this last week as a result of that ruling of foul. One guy says Thigpen never touched Hansenne and another says sure, he racked the Frenchman up, but not until Marcel had pulled a knife on him.

The officials made their decision without consulting either runner, which may be an unwise policy. Stewards at the horse tracks have discovered that much can be gained by talking to the jockeys involved before making decisions in such cases.

Eddie Arcaro had a mount one day that set the pace into the stretch, but died there. Another kid, coming alongside to take the lead, yielded to a reckless impulse and brought his horse over on Eddie, slamming him rudely into the rail.

Now, a mite of roughing during a stretch battle is just part of the game to Arcaro, who can take it and dish it out in equal measure. But this was a gratuitous act of malice, for Arcaro's steed was obviously cooked, and the kid was going to win easily enough without benefit of fouling. Arcaro, boiling mad, snatched his horse over and reached the other kid a belt that made his ears twang like guitars.

The stewards saw the whole thing and, naturally, called both boys upstairs. They were disposed to be lenient with Arcaro in view of the provocation he had been given. They asked, mildly enough:

"What were you trying to do there, Arcaro?"

Eddie was still running a noble temperature.

"I," he said, "was trying to kill the [short Anglo-Saxon word]."

So they had to hit him with the book.

The only individuals who consulted Hansenne after his affair with Thigpen were newspapermen, and they found him cooler than Arcaro had been in that instance. He shrugged a Gallic shrug.

"I am a runner, not a fighter," Marcel smiled. "Thigpen should meet my countryman, Marcel Cerdan."

Like Thigpen, Hansenne returns to the Garden tomorrow, but not in the same race. He will compete in the Zamperini mile, a special event named in honor of Lou Zamperini, the miler who was blown into the Pacific during the war, lived 45 days on a raft, was picked up and imprisoned by the Japanese.

When the race was founded in 1946 it was called the Zamperini Memorial, because Lou was presumed dead. Disagreeing rather stoutly with the committee, Zamperini came back in uniform to serve as starter for the event.

This year it should be called the Zamperini International, for the field includes the visiting European firemen, Hansenne, Willy Slykhuis, Erik Ahlden and Ingar Bengtsson, along with America's Fred Wilt, John Toomey and Curtis Stone.

Hansenne is a sport writer for the Paris daily, L'Equipe, and Stone is circulation manager for the Centre Daily Times of State College, Pa. It ought to be a well-covered race with Marcel reporting it and Curtis peddling the papers.

The Shadow Knows

Wilson Brews Sinister Plot To Stop Pantos Saturday

GEORGE PAPPAFOTIS

THE SECRET leaked out yesterday.

Wilson's formula for winning the Interhigh basketball championship Saturday afternoon is to throttle Central's high-scoring Jimmy Pantos with his own "Shadow."

Actually, there's nothing sinister nor even new about Wilson's strategy.

The "Shadow" is known otherwise as George Pappafotis, a court-wise guard, who has been haunting such hotshot pointmakers as Coolidge's Ken Luxenberg and Western's Bucky Poston for two years.

But the "Shadow's" favorite target has always been Pantos. Last year, Central won the Interhigh championship, losing only its opening game. Its conqueror was Wilson, 30-28. Pantos, who wound up with a 14-point average, tallied only two in that game. Guarding him was the "Shadow."

In racing to the finals this season, Central lost only two games, one to Wilson, 33-29. Pantos has a 17-point average this year, but in that Wilson game, he scored only 7. Shackling him again was Mr. Pappafotis.

There's nothing freakish about George's consistent knack of stopping Pantos. They played basketball together for seven years, from Boys Club 90-pound class league through Jefferson Junior High.

George practically knows ahead of time what Jimmy is planning to do. He knows Pantos' likes and dislikes. He takes advantage of his intimate knowledge to heckle Jimmy into poor performances.

While guarding Jimmy, 5-foot 9-inch George keeps flicking his hand in front of the Central star's eyes, and chatters about their old girl friends. Finally, he steps back, and lets Jimmy shoot.

By that time, Jimmy is usually so rattled that he's way off the target.

George rarely scores, himself, but that's immaterial. Coach Hank Bristor values George for his defensive ability, and leaves the pointmaking up to such keen-eyed lads as Leo Speros, Jim Young, and Don Scott.

The Central game is the last for George, a senior, and he wants it to be a title-winner. It runs in the family. His brother, Mike, was the star of Eastern's 1944 Interhigh championship team.

A. U. Opposes Mt. St. Mary's

American U., still fighting for the Mason-Dixon conference title, travels to Emmitsburg tonight to face Mt. St. Mary's.

Staff Cassell's Eagles hold a previous decision over the spirited Mountaineers but are sure to be somewhat unnerved by the rabid student body that's considered No. 1 in cheering circles.

A. U. dropped its last game at State College to a Penn State team it held an earlier decision over.

Feerick and Scolari Entertain 500 Boys

Bob Feerick and Fred Scolari of the Caps entertained 500 boys in the Bradbury Heights School gym last night as various organizations laid plans for a boys club in the Boulevard Heights, Bradbury Heights and Coral Hills areas in the southeast.

Parker-Gray Beats Maggie Walker, 71-54

After suffering a defeat of 38-36 by Maggie Walker High two days ago in Richmond, Parker-Gray came back last night to defeat the school 71-54 in the Alexandria Recreation Center gym. Eugene Majors paced the winners with 25 points.

PUBLISHER

Some people think the publisher . . . Is one whose block of stock . . . Enables him to play all day . . . And never mind the clock . . . Well, he may be a wealthy man . . . And he may have his say . . . But he is one who usually . . . Puts in a working day . . . Although he has subordinates . . . He has his job to do . . . And he is never satisfied . . . Until he sees it through . . . The daily flow of printers' ink . . . Is running through his veins . . . The same as in the writers and . . . Reporters whom he trains . . . He may not have the time to give . . . Each one his special care . . . But by his proven policies . . . He surely does his share.

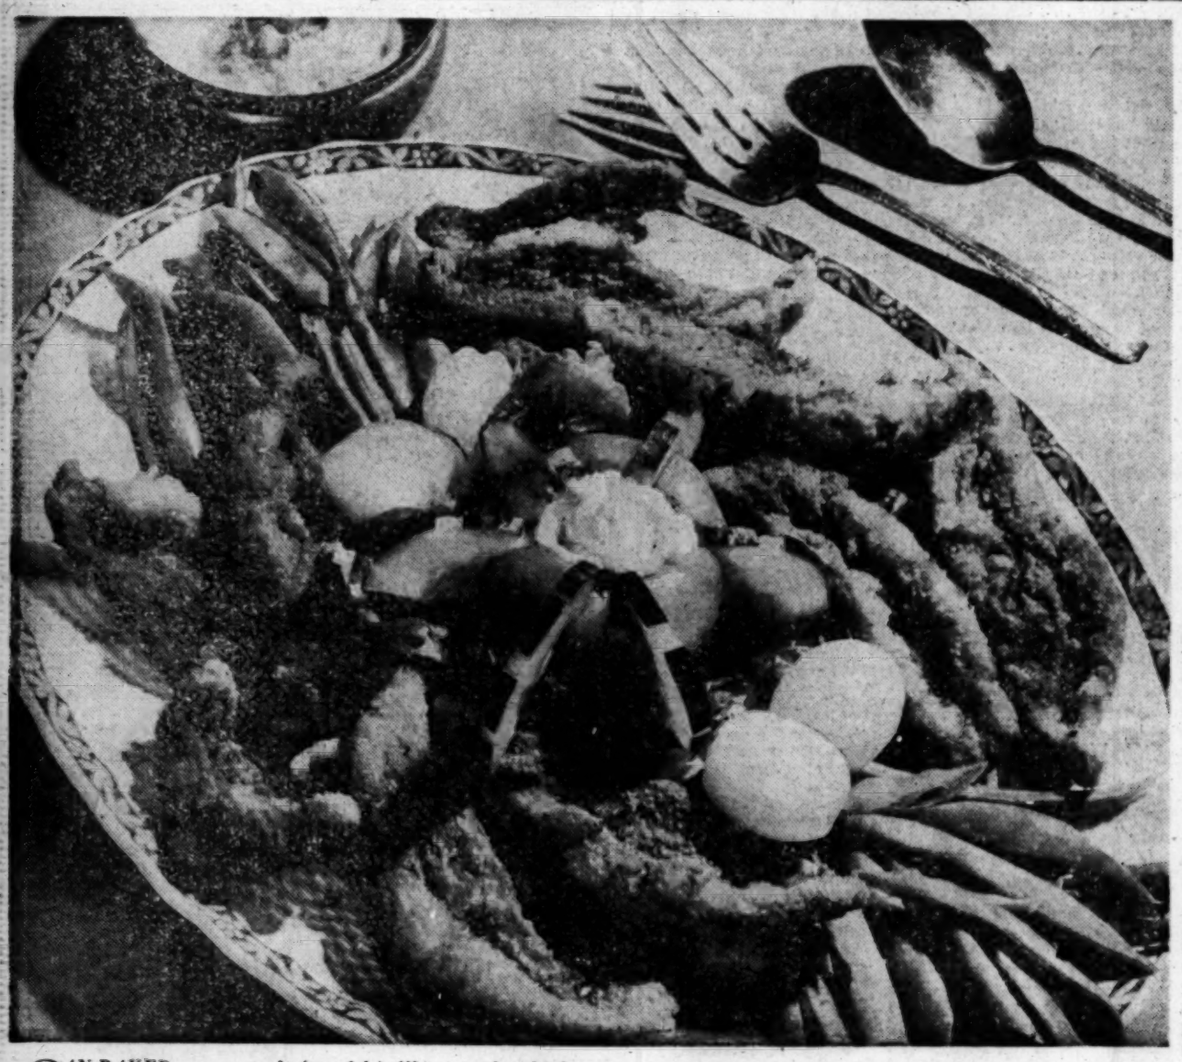
WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1949



PAN-BAKED ocean perch (rosefish) fillets are the chief feature of this mouth-watering platter. Accompanying them are cooked green beans and onions, raw tomato and cucumber. Here's how to bake the filets, which are widely available in frozen form:

PAN-BAKED OCEAN PERCH

Place the contents of two 1-pound packages of quick-frozen ocean perch in a glass baking dish. Add salt and pepper to taste. Melt ¼ pound butter (½ cup) and mix in 2¼ cups cracker meal. Cover the fillets with the butter-crumb mixture. Sprinkle with chopped parsley if desired. Bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) or until fish is tender and crumbs browned. This recipe serves six

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES: Oranges and grapefruit are quite plentiful, and the sweet little Temple oranges are arriving in greater quantity. Lettuce is still high. Carrots are cheap and good and green beans abundant. Cabbage, kale, turnips and other root vegetables are still thrifty buys. Cauliflower is a little cheaper.

Lenten Reminder: There Are Other Fish in the Sea

By Lucia Brown

ARE there only seven kinds of fish in your life? That's all that are well known to those legendary characters, Mr. and Mrs. Average Consumer, a survey shows. Actually, the Fish and Wildlife Service says, there are some 160 varieties of the finny family sold in this country.

Not all the 160 are available in Washington, but a good many are, what with the Chesapeake Bay and the Atlantic Ocean right at our elbows and all sorts of fresh, frozen, canned and smoked fish being shipped into the Capital.

Lent—which starts March 2 and is always marked by a rise in fish eating—is a wonderful time to investigate a few varieties less familiar to you. Mrs. Rose Kerr, home economist for the Fish and Wildlife Service for the past five years, has some good general advice to help out in this eating adventure.

The buying guide on this page is from "Basic Fish Cookery," a booklet compiled by Mrs. Kerr. To go with it, she gives fundamental cookery rules that apply to almost all fish, regardless of flavor, texture, appearance and size.

Mrs. Kerr says that the principal difference in types of fish, as related to fish cookery, is the variation in fat content. As a rule, fat fish, such as salmon or shad, are best for baking, broiling and planking. Their fat content will keep them from becoming dry.

On the other hand, lean fish, such as cod and haddock, are preferred by some for broiling and steaming as their flesh is firm and will not easily fall apart while cooking. Both fat and lean fish are suitable for frying. In broiling or baking lean fish, they should be basted frequently with melted fat. Otherwise they will have a tendency to become dry.

The most important thing to remember in cooking fish, says Mrs. Kerr, is that it is too often overcooked. Just enough cooking to enable the flesh to be flaked easily from the bones will leave the fish moist and tender and bring out its delicate flavor.

"HAMBURGERS of the sea" is the phrase Mrs. Kerr uses to describe ocean perch or rosefish, one of the best bargains in fish nowadays. Although practically unknown to the public until 1935, they are now more widely sold as frozen fillets than any other variety.

Rosefish are also called "redfish," "red perch" and "sea perch," so watch for them under all those names. They're all the same and are all marketed in those boneless side cuts called "fillets." These are small, about eight to the pound, with a mottled reddish skin that makes it easy to tell them apart from other fillets. They are an excellent fish, with firm flesh, and when cooked, the meat is white and flaky with a delicate flavor.

Although Mrs. Kerr likes them oven fried, baked and cooked in other ways, too, she particularly recommends the following dish made with rosefish fillets.

ROSEFISH FILLETS BAKED IN SPANISH SAUCE

2 pounds rosefish fillets

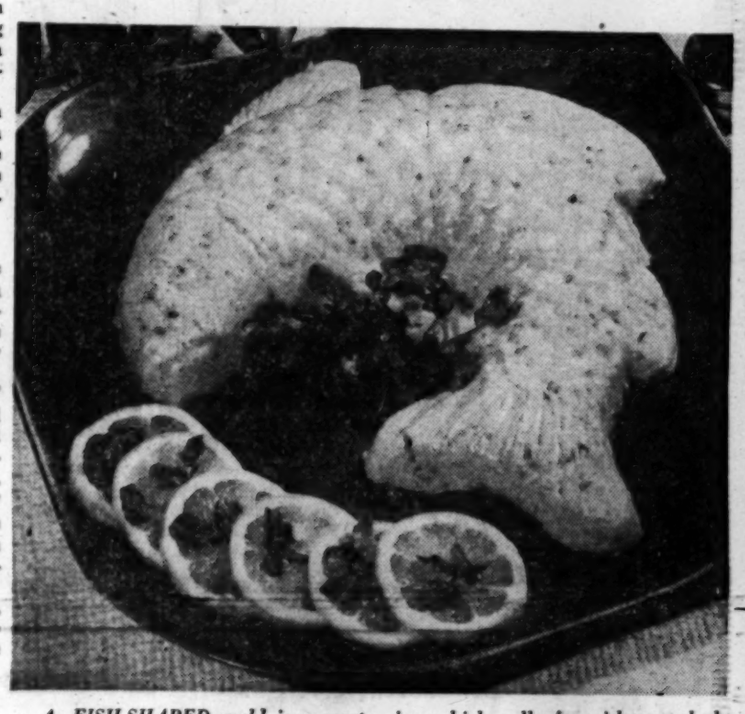
See BROWN, Page 4C, Column 3

CODFISH stands high on the list of fish favorites. With canned, cooked flakes, it's easy to make cakes like this for serving with cheese-olive sauce. Use 2 cups flaked codfish to 4 cups mashed cooked potatoes, 2 slightly beaten eggs, 2 tablespoons butter, ¼ teaspoon pepper, and 1 tablespoon finely minced onion. Blend all well and shape into round, flat cakes. Saute in hot fat until brown, then serve with the following:

CHEESE-OLIVE SAUCE

3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons minced onion
½ cup minced celery
4 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
Few grains cayenne
2 cups milk
1 cup grated American cheese
1/3 cup sliced, stuffed olives

Melt butter, add onion and celery, and cook over low heat until tender, about 5 minutes. Add flour and seasonings and blend. Gradually add milk, while stirring, and cook until smooth and thick, stirring occasionally. Add cheese and stir until melted. Fold in sliced olives.



A FISH-SHAPED mold is a great help in making attractive jellied salad or seafood mousse. A salad recipe which calls for either cooked fish fillets, tuna, or salmon is found on page 4C

Fish Supply, Large, Varied

AN EXTRA large and varied supply of fish is in prospect for Lenten eating this year, thanks mainly to the open winter.

Mild weather has fooled both the fish and the fishermen. Shad have been lured to the lower Chesapeake Bay almost a month early. Boston mackerel have loafed around off the Maryland-Virginia coast instead of going further South. And the fishermen have been kept at their lines and nets practically all winter.

FISH BARGAINS: About the cheapest seafoods right now are ocean perch (rosefish) and pollock, the Fish and Wildlife Service reports. These come from up around Gloucester and Boston, are available both frozen and fresh, mainly in fillet form.

ALSO PLENTIFUL: Haddock, flounder and cod are arriving in quantity from New England, and porgy, bass, trout and croakers from the Hampden Roads area. (They're caught by the dragnet fleet there, which is twice as large as normal this year.) Mackerel is in good supply and plenty of frozen salmon is coming from the West Coast.

NOT AS MANY shad have arrived yet, but they should be very plentiful before Lent is over. A few large rockfish are being caught and cut into steaks, but they are rather high.

SHELLFISH: Oysters from the Chesapeake are cheaper than at Christmas. The scallop supply is good and the wholesale price has dropped. Shrimp is high and crabmeat rather expensive. Few clams are available, but the price is fairly reasonable.

CANNED FISH: The tuna and sardine supply is the largest in years right now. In fact, last year's pack was the biggest in history. The salmon supply isn't as good, since the last catch was small.

MEAT, POULTRY, EGGS: Look for higher meat prices this weekend, especially on fresh pork. Most stores are having to up the price on beef, lamb, and smoked pork, too, in line with higher wholesale prices. Eggs are generally higher than two weeks ago. Chickens are about the same as last weekend.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 17, Always Close to Her Dad Before, Is Icily Ignored by Him Since She Tried To Lie About Cigarettes Found in Her Purse

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am an average girl, 17 years of age, and I come from a very fine home. All my life I have received almost anything I wanted; and I don't mean that I have been spoiled, but rather that I have always been in my father's favor.

A while back I started to smoke, for no special reason except that my friends did. I smoked without my parents' knowledge, until last week my mother found cigarettes in my purse. Since then I have been going through something like mental torture, due to my father's attitude.

When my parents first questioned me as to whether I smoked, I said "No." Later I admitted the cigarettes were mine, and asked my mother to forgive me, and promised her I wouldn't smoke again until I am older. She readily forgave me but my father saw differently. He hasn't spoken to me since.

Girl Seeks Answer to Many Questions

HE TOLD my mother it wasn't the idea that I smoked without his permission, but that I lied about it. I have asked him twice already to forgive me, but he doesn't answer. And every time I see him I say "Hello," but he pretends he doesn't even hear me. I am always crying because of this, and I am not the same with my friends.

His attitude hurts so much because we were so close; and there are two things on my mind: 1. Should I wait and let him speak to me; or should I ask him again to forgive me? 2. I haven't smoked since then, but I really want to. Should I talk this over with my mother and ask her permission, even though I know she dislikes it?

I can't go on feeling this way much longer, and I shall abide by any advice you give me. Did I do anything seriously wrong? I keep thinking: if father is punishing me so strongly for a trivial matter, what will he ever do in case of something worse? D. L.

Dad and Daughter Equally Need Help

DEAR D. L.: What I say here is meant to help your father as well as you, for he is terribly hurt and worried, too, and obviously doesn't know how to cope, maturely and constructively, with imperfections of human nature when they "hit home" to him.

Let's consider the question: Have you done anything really wrong? Well, it's self-damaging to sneak and lie, because these tactics, if they become habits, undermine character in every way. And that's why your father says that he doesn't mind the smoking so much as he minds your evasive tactics or attempts to deceive your devoted parents—especially him, who has loved and admired you extravagantly.

He is deeply anxious, therefore, and venting his anxiety in terms of hostility, trying to "teach you a lesson you'll never forget." He honestly thinks he is doing this for your good, to frighten you into conforming all your future actions to his wishes—as a service to your welfare—but unknown to himself he is also punishing you for "hurting" him.

He is jealously wounded by evidence that you've drifted into alliances that have secrets from him, that leave him out; and he is reacting emotionally to this "blow," too, instead of using his head to try to find out what goes on, what caused you to dabble in double-dealing, what factors in character training may be at fault, etc.

Girl Is Divided by Counter Forces

I CAN'T cover the whole subject in this brief space, but in essence the trouble is that you are very immature, and your parents too proprietary, too inclined to treat you as a baby, instead of gamely helping you develop independent "strength" for living. Thus you lean on approval of all sorts. You associate "pleasing" with being loved securely. Others' expectations become your guides to action; and at 17 you are caught between opposing forces—parents versus gang.

When the gang starts smoking, you smoke, too, just because it's "the thing." Then, alas, the habit catches on. But in smoking, you are going against your parents' expectations, which creates a dilemma. And you try to solve it by smoking furtively, and trying to "lie out of it" when caught. Your parents need psychological counsel at first hand, in order to correct their mistakes and thus help you outgrow your weak conformity to gang-example.

I can't encourage you to resume smoking, which is detrimental to nervous and physical health, as all doctors admit. Rather I say, break the habit before it enslaves you. But, of course, talk freely to your mother, who seems to be better balanced than dad; and here's hoping this article opens his eyes to his need of objective guidance. M. H.

You Should Never Put Manana in Your Vocabulary, on a Diet

By Ida Jean Kain

When it comes to buckling down to diet, most women belong to the Manana Club . . . alway tomorrow. Then happily, the next day something else comes up, and they just can't get to it . . . but tomorrow!

You know how it goes? It's a pleasure form of day dreaming . . . but definitely fattening. Since you really are going to diet tomorrow, you figure you'd better eat a hearty meal now to gain strength for what lies ahead . . . That's the way weight goes . . . up.

The members of the Manana Club always exercise too . . . tomorrow. How about it? You fondly imagine that tomorrow it will be easy to stretch, twist and bend . . . ah, you can hardly wait to get started.

Wake up! There is just one way to diet or exercise tomorrow, and that is to start today . . . it is absolutely the only way. If you felt that by not starting today you'd be stuck with that 20 to 40 pounds of excess weight forever . . . you'd start . . . today. But of course you can start at any time—just any time—and that fact is so reassuring it keeps you from starting at all.

Forget about diet. The new slant on slimming is to eat to lose weight. Eating can't do it? Ah, you should see the letters that come across this desk . . . from women who have tried diets, dozens of diets, several times a year, and stayed with them for three days, and back to overeating. Not until they hit on the idea of eating to slim down . . . eating three good meals a day made up of the protective foods, were they able to make any dent in their weight.

Here is a promise: Start today to follow this pattern of eating, and you can get back that once-lovely figure. Do it—plan the day's meals around this list: EAT six ounces of lean meat (about one third pound), a pint of buttermilk, an egg, an ounce of yellow cheese, three vegetables, a citrus fruit and a second fruit, three thin slices of whole-grain bread, and one pat of butter. (Supplement the menus with one multiple vitamin capsule a day.) Eat three meals . . . do not overeat at the evening meal.

Follow that food pattern today, tomorrow and all of the tomorrows until the excess weight has been turned back into energy, and you'll look and feel fit and young again!

The scientific wonder diet brings a loss of 1½ to 3 pounds a week and provides perfect nutrition.

'Middle' Child Needs a Real Chance to Excel

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The behavior of the middle child in a family is motivated by his or her need to compensate for the lack of a distinctive position.

The older child has the position of prestige as first born. The baby gets the favored attention that "little" things always inspire.

What is left for the middle child? Just to force attention in any possible way.

If this child happens to be a brilliant student, a musician of outstanding talent, a dancer, a witty conversationalist his problems are solved. He attracts attention and distinction and suffers nothing from his anomalous position.

If he possesses no means of being distinctive he will have to manufacture some. This second child will always be in competition with the older child. In such case he must literally pull himself up by his bootstraps in order to make the same headway in school as the older child. He may find himself acting as a rival in the affections of playmates, if they happen to be of like ages. This is a terrific conflict for the younger child who lacks the capacity to be a leader and must always remain a follower of older children.

He may take the path of least resistance and become the "sickly" member of the family, the one who catches all the diseases, has the worst sore throats, always, in fact, needs the most of the mother's attention.

Before labeling a child with descriptions which satisfy his desire to be outstanding, take note of his need. Give him an opportunity to excel in ways other than misbehavior.

Play up his talents. Encourage his skills, whatever they may be. And most of all, show him the loving attention he will wrangle by hook or crook and often in ways which makes him a troublesome, instead of an enjoyable member of the family.

His Own Story . . .

Children like all kinds of stories. When they are young, a prime favorite is the story in which they, themselves, are the heroes.

Sometimes the stories can be imaginative, brave new adventures in which Sammy or Sally venture forth to discover some strange, unheard-of animal or, in imagination, go to live in another town. But the real stories of the child's past experiences are just as fascinating and sometimes even more so. How they love to hear over and over again what happened in the hospital when they were born, how Daddy rushed Mother to the doctor, and what the nurse said when she first saw the baby!

One of the most helpful things about such stories is that there is so much material on which to draw. Trips to the beach or mountains, visits to Grandma, the day that the horse ran wild past the house—all sorts of experiences are high adventure to the youngsters in whose lives they have played a part.

They will still want storybook tales and the time-worn stories that children have always enjoyed, but their own stories will continue to be favorites until they get to the age when such things are "baby stuff."

Philosophical Footnote:

To Young Dean Acheson, One Horse Was Transport; More Than That, an Income

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

HERE'S a quiet story culled from Secretary of State Acheson's youth which points up reassuringly his common sense reaction to the extravagantly sensational.

Years ago, in preautomobile days, the Achesons summered in a Connecticut shore cottage. Their father was a minister, consequently they lived simply. The Achesons kept no horses, and when they wanted to get about, a carriage was hired from the local livery stable. One season the wealthy Chase family from Waterbury arrived in the neighborhood equipped with a plethora of expensive chattels.

Dean Acheson's sister Margaret was agog, kept tab on the Chases, discovered that seven horses, six carriages, coachman and several grooms had been installed. Rushing home she confronted her brother with these exciting facts. "Did you know, Dean, the Chases have seven horses, six carriages, a coachman and two grooms?"

The future Secretary of State, who was absorbed in a book, emitted a noncommital grunt. This didn't satisfy the thrilled Margaret.

"What would you do, Dean," she persisted, "if you had seven horses, six carriages, a coachman and two grooms?"

Margaret's brother, without lifting his eyes from the page, answered calmly: "Run a livery stable, of course!"

THERE'S nothing more fascinating than words and unfortunately, like vegetables, there are far too few of them. So it is with the keen delight of a connoisseur unearthing some uniquely cherished object that we came upon a new, provocatively telling word. It's a word especially applicable to congressional budget squabbles, and in helpful effort this department offers it for free. The word is "Pismirism," and means "petty spending." It is derived from "Pismire," which is an annoyingly busy species of ant. The connotation is easy, ants are noted for thrifty habits. Get it?

Recipes From Famous Fishing Centers

3 tablespoons fat or salad oil
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups canned tomatoes
½ green pepper, diced
1 bay leaf
1 teaspoon salt
1 whole clove
½ teaspoon sugar
Dash pepper

Cook onion in fat until tender. Add flour and blend. Add all the remaining ingredients except fish, and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Remove bay leaf and clove. Arrange skinned fillets in a shallow greased baking dish and cover with sauce. Bake uncovered in a moderate oven 350 degrees Fahrenheit for 25 to 30 minutes, or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Garnish and serve hot. This recipe serves six.

WHAT could be better for the main dish at lunch or the starter for dinner than hot creamy oyster soup or stew? Mrs. Kerr has an interesting variation on this recipe that brings a little touch of tomato to the smooth mixture. Here it is:

TOMATO OYSTER BISQUE

1 quart milk
1 slice onion
4 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon flour
2½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 can condensed tomato soup

Drain oysters and chop. Add liquor and heat slowly to boiling point. Scald milk with slice of onion. Melt butter in top of double boiler. Blend in flour, add milk and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Add oysters, seasonings, tomato soup and heat to boiling point. Serve immediately with croutons. This recipe serves six.

HERE are a couple of fish recipes straight from Gloucester, Mass., a town that lies clasped in a lobster-claw of land where Cape Ann juts from the north shore. Around this great fishing center, they like to make dishes such as the following:

MOLDED SEA FOOD SALAD

1 tablespoon gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
1 cup boiled salad dressing
2 cups flaked, cooked fish fillets
½ cup diced celery
1 pimineto, minced

Soften gelatin in cold water, then dissolve over boiling water. Add to the dressing (made by recipe found in practically all cookbooks.) Fold in fish, celery and pimiento. Turn into previously wet mold. Chill, then unmold on plate. Garnish with watercress and lemon slices or lettuce and thinly sliced cucumber. Serve with seasoned sour cream or mayonnaise. (Tuna or salmon can be substituted for flaked fish fillets, if desired.)

FINNAN HADDIE RAREBIT

In double boiler, heat ½ pound old English cheese, cut small, with 1 cup heavy cream and 1 cup flaked finnan haddie. When well blended, stir in beaten egg and serve on toast. This recipe serves six.

About Mailing Cakes

I would like to send my grandmother a cake, some cupcakes, and fudge for her birthday. Although the distance is only 500 miles, I know from previous experience that it will be a week to 10 days before the package arrives, even though marked perishable. Could you give me some suggestions as to how I could wrap the homemade goods so they would still be fresh upon arrival? What about wrapping each cake and piece of fudge separately in aluminum foil? It seems to keep food fresher than anything I have ever used before. L. B. C.

Your aluminum foil wrapping idea is an excellent one for the cakes, both cup and large. You could also use it for the fudge, but it is not absolutely necessary if you cut the pieces of the fudge so they will exactly fit the box in which they are placed. Using a separate box of cupcakes, fudge and large cake, here's the way I'd suggest you pack them.

For the fudge: Choose a substantial box which will hold, in one layer, the candy you are sending. Place a ¼-inch (when pushed down) layer of shredded wax or tissue paper in the bottom of the box. On this put a sheet of wax paper which is large enough to turn back over the candy in a double layer. Now, put in the pieces, taking time to fit them in so there is no space between the pieces or at the edges of the box. Cover with wax paper and put enough shredded paper over the candy so that, when closed, the box doesn't rattle at all.

The cupcakes should be packed in a firm box which is large enough to allow some sort of packing between each cake. The packing could be shredded paper or clean excelsior. After the cakes have been wrapped in the foil, wrap them again in a firm paper so that the foil will be protected against breaking. In packing, be sure that no two cakes touch and put ample packing along all the outer edges. It would be wise to write the number of cupcakes in the box on the top to make unpacking easier.

The large cake should be packed in a box large enough to allow 2 to 3 inches of packing around it. Place a layer of packing on the bottom, put in the well-wrapped cake and pack well around and on top of it. Some find popcorn, as well as those mentioned above, a good packing material for large cakes.

Noted Designers Show Glamorous Chapeaux

By Peggy Preston

NOW, would you ever have guessed:

1. THAT SO FAR AS THEIR HAT STYLES ARE CONCERNED, women are a lot of copy cats, meekly following male leadership. In all history, the bonnet is one of the few types that did not have its inspiration in men's headgear.

2. THAT YOU SHOULD NOT PAY ATTENTION TO MEN who say you should wear the pull-on type of hat that resembles their own fedoras. They may claim to like it, but it has never been proven that they seldom turn around to look at the girl wearing one. And what good is a hat like that?

3. ONCE A WOMAN DISCOVERS THE STYLE OF HAT that is most becoming to her, she should remain faithful to it. Each of her hats should follow the basic lines that flatter her face and figure. Variations should be confined to fabric, trimmings and colors.

All this, and more, too, we learned in brief chats with the six "big name" hat designers who invaded Washington yesterday. With hat boxes bulging with their newest designs, they arrived by plane from New York to attend the monthly luncheon of the Washington Fashion Group at the Washington Hotel.

Included were Florence Reichman, Laddie Northridge, Peg Fischer, Chanda, Lenesta and Braagaard. With them was Mrs. Mary Kelley, director of the Millinery Fashion Bureau in New York, who served as commentator at the hat fashion show following the luncheon.

"Spring is a new hat" was the theme of the show which presented so many glamorous chapeaux that we wanted to hide our own trusty old felt under the luncheon table.

Flowers, flowers were everywhere, combined with straw, veiling and velvet ribbons. Laddie Northridge contributed a huge cartwheel made completely of lilies of the valley; Florence Reichman showed some delectable straws, swatched in fragile veiling; Lenesta's group was wearable and smart.

The vogue for short hair was reflected in the general, over-all designs of the hats. None were made to clamp down tightly over the ears. Instead, the crowns were small, yet well fitted to the head. The brims swept back or upward to reveal a good portion of the hair.

All the designers agreed that making hats for short hair styles presents a problem. Said Miss Fischer:

"You need to do several contrary things at once; make the hat small, yet big enough to fit the head and remain securely in place. If it is a big hat, it must be small enough in certain spots to allow the short hair to show to advantage over the forehead and ears."

BRILLIANT red straw bonnet, with gay flowers on it is a pretty fashion for Easter. Wife of Netherlands Counselor Predicts Indonesian Freedom

By Genevieve Reynolds

Some time in 1950 the United States of Indonesia will be born as a free and sovereign state, predicted Mme. Henri Helb, wife of the Counselor of the Netherlands Embassy, in a luncheon address yesterday before the Capital Division, Woman's National Farm and Garden Association.

She pointed out that in the meantime an all-Indonesian interim government will be set up, elections held and a constitution drawn up.

Mme. Helb, who was born in Java, told about 200 members and their guests that Indonesia produces many products vital to the United States defense program, such as palm oil, tin, rubber, quinine. "Indonesian palm oil is the world's purest, a necessary factor in long-time storage, and therefore very vital for stockpiling," she explained. "Through an ECA arrangement the United States will buy nearly four million dollars of the strategic material for stockpiling."

But, she warned, "If the Communists gain control of Indonesia the United States would be cut off not only from palm oil but other vital products."

The speaker recalled that the Dutch reached the Spice Islands, the Moluccas and the rest of Indonesia about 350 years ago in search of spice. At that time the population was four million. Today it is 76 million.

"When the Dutch arrived in Indonesia spices were the only important article there," said Mme. Helb. "All of the export articles such as tea, cane sugar, rubber, quinine, tobacco, fibers were planted and developed by the Dutch. Rice quality and quantity were doubled, irrigation systems introduced and the erosion problem completely solved."

Indonesian women had more freedom than those in other Oriental countries. There are traces of the original matriarchy which sanctioned polygamy but no harems. And the women did not have to wear veils, according to Mme. Helb.

"While the Indonesian woman had no say in religious or public life," she explained, "nonetheless, retailing and handicrafts were in her hands. Marketing has given her a great deal of sensible, worldly wisdom."

An Indonesian motif was carried out in decorations and menus for the luncheon. Raden-Adjeng Soepianti, native Javanese who assisted club members with planning the native dishes centered around "Nassi-Goereng"—a rice dish—was among the honored guests at the luncheon, held in the Y. W. C. A.

Other honor guests included Mme. Adrienne Boissevain, Dutch heroine of the Underground; Baroness van Walderen Rengersm, wife of the Assistant Trade Commissioner for Indonesia; Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Princess Atalie Unkalunt and Miss Bertha Noyes.

Porter Hit Uses Stellar Standbys

By Richard L. Coe

"KISS ME, KATE"—and for Cole Porter's rhythm, don't forget the comma—is the musical smash of the year and brings up the question of what happens when the leads can't appear.

Time was, "understudies" would take over in the illness of a principal. As in several current offerings, however, critical praise lavished on both Alfred Drake and Patricia Morison has made the management tremble lest any accident or illness befall these able singing actors. So has grown up the comparatively recent practice of "standbys."

Throughout the New York run of "Annie Get Your Gun," Ethel Merman's role was protected by the presence of Mary Jane Walsh, a top songstress in her own right who received $750 a week just for being on tap for any performance. When Ethel took off on vacation or illness, Mary Jane stepped in, getting a bonus for each performance she played.

The same was true of Beatrice Lillie's value to "Inside U. S. A." During the New York run, Comedienne Paula Lawrence was her standby and played several weeks. When the musical took to the road, Miss Lawrence didn't go along. Consequently, during Miss Lillie's current illness in Boston, the show is off until she recovers.

In the case of "Kiss Me, Kate," the smash hit is handsomely covered by two able folk. Cole Porter has been on the Coast considering leads for a second company and the grapevine comes up with several film couples who'd like to promote themselves in the leads. These are Mr. and Mrs. Gene Raymond (she is Jeanette MacDonald) and Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Johnson (she is Kathryn Grayson). I'd hate to see either microphone-mugging couple in the parts, and I wish them no luck whatever in their campaign.

Top-Notch Standbys

For these two juicy parts demand just the zingy aplomb Drake and Miss Morison are giving them. This sparkling variation of "The Taming of the Shrew" finds a divorced stage couple playing the Shakespearian roles in a frisky revival trying-out in Baltimore. The shouting, ranting and raving the book demands, and the skilled singing interspersed in the Porter score, are the sort of thing achieved only by stage know-how, of which these two have plenty.

Drake, of course, is no surprise in the part of 50 sides—the longest in musical comedy. The original Curly of "Oklahoma!" has style, voice and zoom. Miss Morison's success should surprise no one, but it has. They forget she sprang to attention in "Two Bouquets," a New York musical that took her to Hollywood, which never once made use of the skill that attracted moviedom's attention. Instead she was buried as a villainess in grade B flicks. The most heartening sight in Gotham these nights is watching Patricia put over such songs as the amusing "I Hate Men" to the consternation of visiting film folk at the Century. Atta girl, Pat!

Standing by for Drake is Keith Andes, the handsome blond giant you saw at the National as "The Chocolate Soldier" last year. Keith kept waiting for Deems Taylor's "Moll Flanders" to come to life, but it never has reached the rehearsal stage and the week his second son was born he signed as Drake's standby. I can pretty well assure you that should Drake be ailing when you manage to squeeze into this best ticket-seller, you'll see a more than acceptable hero in Andes.

The Records Are Out

Anne Jeffreys, a star in her own right, is standing by for Miss Morison. The star of Sigmund Romberg's recently closed "My Romance" and of Kurt Weill's musical, "Street Scene," seems reluctant to go back to the horse operas that were her Hollywood fate. I not only hope Miss Jeffreys doesn't go back, but also that she and Andes get a crack at the second company leads.

When "Kiss Me, Kate" opened, the management flatly stated there would be no second company, as suitable leads could never be found. Now that the excitement of a sensational opening has died down and pleas increase for a duplicate "Kate," it seems to me Producers Saint Subber and Lemuel Ayers ought to wise up to the unmined gold of the road.

For covering the land already are 200,000 "Kiss Me, Kate" albums, something of a record (pun!), for they were in the disc shops within a month after the New York opening. They're going fast, and if you collect show music, this is for you. (The regular "old [illegible] is $7; the new long-playing, $4.85.)

And when you wade into Porter's bright score, don't make the mistake of taking the music at surface value. The globe trotter is making fun of all sorts of musical styles in his score, and you'll be amused with his schamtzy imitation of old-time Shubert operettas in "Wunderbar." His words are wondrously absurd ("Gazing down on the Jungfrau," from a cottage indeed!)' but his waltz is so charming you'll enjoy it straight. He also imitates Cole Porter!

WINDING UP A RECORD—Jean Simmons and Laurence Olivier in one of their memorable scenes from "Hamlet," which concludes its run Tuesday night at the Little. Counting the 11-week stay at the Playhouse, this totals 29 weeks for "Hamlet," one more than record-holder "Henry V"

Argentina Plans to Seize All Newsprint

Buenos Aires, Feb. 24 (AP).—The government proposed today to seize all newsprint in Argentina and distribute it among the country's papers as it sees fit.

The council said Argentina is short of foreign exchange to buy newsprint. Publishers of all Argentine newspapers except the two largest independent dailies—La Prensa and La Nacion—have backed the plan. The proposal would affect these two papers almost exclusively.

La Prensa now has a 10-month supply of paper on hand. La Nacion has enough for eight months. Under the proposed decree, these stocks would be taken for distribution to other papers.

The size of the two papers, which do not follow the government line, was reduced last October by a decree limiting major papers to 16 pages. This decree, however, permitted papers that print government advertising and propaganda to publish more pages.

Government printers were assigned to publish two strikebound pro-government newspapers here today, on the third anniversary of President Juan D. Peron's election.

The two papers—El Mundo and La Fronda—were the first to be published in this capital city of three million inhabitants for 17 days.

They were put out by printers transferred from the mint and other government printing agencies.

The press strike has been declared illegal by the government and 230 printers jailed. The strikers, who originally have went out for more pay, have refused to return until these men have been released.

Olivier Is Given Britain's 'Oscar'

London, Feb. 24 (AP).—Britain's film industry gave its top "Oscar" today to Sir Laurence Olivier for producing, directing and starring in "Hamlet."

The Film Academy nominated "Hamlet" as the "best picture from any source released in the United Kingdom during 1948."

"The Louisiana Story," produced in the United States and directed by Robert Flaherty was judged the best documentary of the year.

Caracas Strike Brings Newspaper Stoppage

Caracas, Venezuela, Feb. 24 (AP).—All the major newspapers in this city failed to appear today because of a printers' strike.

The stoppage is in protest against the detention of union leaders and the reported proposal to revise contracts.

Robot Device Takes Message Over Telephone

New York, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Civilization surged forward today with another gadget—the mechanical telephone answerer. It works this way:

You call Joe Doaks. There's a click and a voice says:

"Joe isn't home. This is his mechanical telephone answerer speaking. If you'd like to leave a message I'll take it on my wire recorder and Joe can play it back when he comes home."

The devcie, called the tele-magnet, will cost about $200 and will be on the market in less than a month.

About the size of a small table phonograph, the machine records up to 60 minutes of messages. After playing the wire recorder, the owner can erase the messages and set the machine again.

N. H. State Expose Wins Broun Award

New York, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—Elias A. McQuaid, former reporter for the New Hampshire News, a weekly, and now a press attache of the United States Embassy in Paris, was named winner today of the 1948 Broun Memorial Award.

Barth

The $500 award, presented annually by the American Newspaper Guild for the "most outstanding journalistic achievement in the spirit of Heywood Broun," was awarded unanimously for McQuaid's expose of the granting of $700,000 in New Hampshire State contracts without bids.

Five more awards of $100 each, made through a fund provided by Washington Correspondent Robert S. Allen, went to:

Theodore C. Link of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, for his expose of graft and corruption, vice and gambling in Illinois which "led to the defeat of the (Gov. George) Green machine at the polls."

Barth Wins Award

Don Magnuson of the Seattle Times, for his work in freeing Clarence G. Boggie, after 13 years in prison for a murder he did not commit.

Columnist Drew Pearson, for his column charging payroll padding and kickbacks to Congressman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), former Un-American Activities Committee chairman, who now is facing trial on these charges.

Alan Barth, editorial writer of The Washington Post and now on leave as a Nieman Fellow at Harvard, for a series of editorials on civil liberties problems raised by Government attempts to deal with Communist threats to national security.

Barth received an award in May 1948 from Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity, for editorials called "informative, persuasive and written in clean, clear English." He was given an honorable mention citation by the Broun Memorial Award Committee in 1945.

Others Commended

Carl Groat, editor of the Cincinnati Post, for his editorial on Freedom Train ideals and local conditions.

Carl Levin of the New York Herald Tribune, for his stories on the commutation of Ilse Koch's sentence.

Edward O'Neill and Joseph Martin of the New York Daily News for their campaign on housing.

Richard C. Looman of the San Diego Journal, for his expose of quack psychologists and psychiatric charlatans in the San Diego area.

W. McNeil Lowry of the Dayton News, for his stories leading to the indictment of Roger Slaughter as an unregistered lobbyist.

Martin Agronsky of the American Broadcasting Co., for the consistently high standard of his radio broadcasts.

Lee Zhito Named

Lee Zhito, for his stories in Billboard which resulted in the FCC investigation of station KMPC on charges of ordering slanting of news broadcasts.

Leon Sonderegger of the Providence Bulletin, for his series on American Medicine.

The judges pointed out that by the time McQuaid and his weekly newspaper were finished with the story, the State controller had been fired, a grand jury had indicted two officials on 123 counts, the State treasurer was sued for $250,000 in a civil action by the State of New Hampshire and a special legislative inquiry was started.

"The stories are not too well written," the judges said, "but they show how a conscientious reporter, following the tradition of Heywood Broun, can perform a service to his community and reflect credit to his profession."

The competition drew 73 nominations. Judges were Bert Andrews, chief of the New York Herald Tribune's Washington bureau and winner of the 1947 Broun award; Karin Walsh, Chicago Sun-Times city editor; Nathan Robertson, Washington writer, and Herbert Block, Washington Post cartoonist.

Block withdrew from the panel of judges, and Robert S. Allen sat in his place, while editorial submissions were being considered.

Women Warned

Danger Seen In Hormone Skin Creams

Chicago, Feb. 24 (U.P.).—An article in Hygeia, an American Medical Association publication, warned today that hormone skin creams may be harmful.

Mrs. Maxine Block of Hollywood wrote that one medical authority asks women not to use hormone creams until more information is obtained about hormone effect on the human reproductive system. Tests on animals show there is some danger that the hormones may cause malignant cancers in the animals, she said. Experiments with the creams on guinea pigs sometimes cause wrinkels to disappear.

U. S. Farm Women Like Paris Follies After First Shock

Paris, Feb. 24 (AP).—A party of 30 Midwestern farm women now touring Europe to discover how the European Recovery Program is progressing is hitting the high-spots and getting to see a lot of things not included in the ERP.

Last night they went to the Follies.

"It isn't exactly the sort of thing we'd see back home," said 70-year-old Mrs. Hattie Giese of Dunlap, Iowa, who was egged on by her nine brothers and sisters to make the trip.

But Mrs. Pearl Bodemer of Cozad, Nebr., who has five grandchildren, seemed to sum up the opinion of all when she said, "I was shocked—but I really liked it."

This afternoon the party attended fashion shows given by leading French designers.

Virginia Schools To Vie on Radio

Fourth, fifth and sixth-graders of the Chesterbrook School of Falls Church, Va., and the Baileys Cross Roads (Va.) Elementary School will compete on Quizdown at 10 a. m. Saturday over Station WTOP.

A weekly half-hour quiz show sponsored by The Washington Post Quizdown will originate this Saturday from the auditorium of the Oakton (Va.) Elementary School, on Route 123 in Fairfax County, Va.

On the Town

The daily routine of Betty Madigan, new chanteuse at the Sazerac Room (Old New Orleans), points to one thing: music is her life.

Betty

Apart from her professional career, Betty is majoring in music at Catholic University. Every day she studies the history of music, harmony, piano and voice there. In the evenings of course, she's projecting her deep voice to every corner of the intimate Sazerac Room.

A native Washingtonian and graduate of Woodrow Wilson High School, Betty began her vocal career at the tender age of 13—six years ago. During high school she managed to sing at clubs, parties and a night club or two.

Now comes the puzzled plaint of Lawrence Tom, the man who guides the destinies of the Casino Royal.

At noontime, he says, the Chinese-American establishment does a rousing luncheon business. "Day in, day out." After dark it turns into a night club, and the revues pull plenty customers. This is good, Tom avers.

It's the twilight zone that hits him shaking his head—the hour between 5 and 7:30 p. m. For, he reports, then the casino serves dinners oriental or western to fewer patrons than could be. And then it is that Tom ponders the complexities of the dine-and-dance field.

Says Tom: "It gets dark and they (potential diners) think it's a night club." Well, it is—from 7:30 p. m. on. At that time dancing begins to the music of Jack "Jive" Schaffer's orchestra. With it comes the Federal entertainment tax.

But from 5 to 7:30 p. m. the music is piped in, and the cabaret aspect is out. That is a good time, Tom says, to try out the casino's Moo Goo Gai Pan on the little woman. "If they've ever eaten chow mein or chop suey they'll like this."

Translated, Moo Goo Gai Pan is sliced tender white chicken meat sauted mushrooms, water chestnuts, bamboo shoots, and Chinese green vegetables.

Entertainment-wise, the June Jackson dancers—a six-girl line which has just completed a 13-month run at the Shez Ami in Buffalo—will open Tuesday at the Casino Royal. Details on the rest of the show later.

Jan Krupa, organist at the Sheraton Lounge (Sheraton Hotel), is playing Washington for the first time in a career that began when he was 12.

That was "some time back," he says, in Pennsylvania, where his daddy owned a chain of movie houses and he tootled the pipe organ for silent screen spectators. He is one of nine children—three of whom proved to have an affinity with the instrument.

At the lounge, Krupa is an amenable organ pounder. He'll play anything asked of him, provided it's adaptable. If it isn't, he suggests another tune, and, gaining approval, swings into it. This he does in an easy fashion amid the pleasant atmosphere of the newly-redecorated room.

The redecoration, incidentally, features large picture panels set into the walls depicting the city's famous sights. The scenes are etched into black plexiglass, with lighting coming from behind. Very nice. ROBERT P. JORDAN.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Golfers Could Also Use Some 'Rent Control'

Since my column on the administration of the Interior Department's public golf courses, several District Liners have complained that I overlooked an important point.

Public links are used by two general categories of players: the beginner, and the golfer who cannot afford the expense of a private course.

The beginner (I'm reminded) usually rents clubs for each round of play, because the golf bug has not yet bitten him hard enough to cause him to buy an outfit of his own.

The private concessionaire who has the inside track at Interior charges 20 cents per round for each club (and bag) he rents out.

Even a beginner needs a mid-iron, mashie, niblick, putter, brassie and bag. That's six items; the rental for 18 holes is $1.20.

Irate players point out that many brands of clubs retail for as low as $4 each, and that anybody who buys in large quantities can undoubtedly get a substantial discount.

So, if the clubs cost the concessionaire $3 each and he gets 20 cents per round for renting them out, they're "paid for" by the time the 16th customer shows up.

However the rusty condition of most of these sticks attests to the fact that they've been in service for years, and are still earning their owner a juicy profit.

But the present concessionaire claims that he is losing money, and will have to raise his prices this season.

Just to make sure that these prices are already out of line, I checked with the public recreation boards of a dozen comparable cities.

In no instance did I find rates that were anyplace near as high and one golf director wrote:

"We charge by the set, not by the club, and have been forced to raise our prices, because of increasing costs. We can no longer rent out a full set of clubs for 15 cents, and are now charging 25 cents so that we can liquidate our investment on a business-like basis."

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four black kittens, 7 weeks old; lots of personality." (Sligo 7264.)

"Small, cream-colored female dog, very friendly and affectionate." (Warfield 2113.)

MISCELLANY

On most Wednesdays of recent weeks The Washington Post radio log for WTOP at 10 a. m. has listed "Rosemary." I'm going to have to tune in some day and find out what kind of program that is . . . Incidentally, M. D. S. has suggested a fine idea for my program (which by a strange coincidence is aired at the same hour by the same station). He says: "We've read a great deal about the upcoming sales tax for the District, but we still don't know what it will include and how it will work. How about a comprehensive discussion?" . . . Good suggestion. I'll try to have it ready in time for this morning's broadcast . . . "I wonder when the last of those invalid streetcar tokens will arrive at Children's Hospital?" writes Mrs. Ralph L. Clark of 1502 North Utah st., Arlington, Va.—and she punctuates her query by sending along some more tokens . . . As does Mrs. Grace I. McMahon of 2111 T st. se. (who found hers in cleaning out a desk) . . . "Gene Tierney is going to be mighty surprised to see the Marlboro Theater's version of the romantic leads in this picture," writes Barbara Clark of 6371 Oxon Hill rd. se. as she sends in a clipping which advertises: "'That Wonderful Urge' with Tyrone Power and Gene Autry" . . . The substitution of Autry for Tierney indicates that there's been a mixup in the genes someplace along the line . . . P. E. Fuller of 2121 H st. nw. remains unreconciled to transit radio, and says that the only way the drivers can be "unaffected" by the distraction of the receivers (as claimed) is if they're all stone deaf . . . It has now been revealed that a Russian rocket, fired in practice, landed in the American zone of Germany some time ago. You might say that the Russians aim to displease.

MITCH LIKES TO COUNT "ONE AND TWO AND . . ."

It has long been my contention that Washington has the most unusual cab drivers in America.

They include college students, Government workers, preachers, accountants, men with 20-20 vision who can't see a single passenger in the first zone, Shakespeare scholars, a mild sprinkling of roughnecks—and music lovers.

By way of example, consider the experience of Mrs. Philip G. Strong, 1424 33d st. nw. Mrs. Strong is publicity chairman for the Women's Committee of the National Symphony fund drive.

Like most of the folks who are working on the drive, Mrs. Strong keeps right on "selling" wherever she goes. So when she engaged a cab the other day and found the driver listening to symphony music, it was inevitable that Mrs. Strong would deliver her usual "commercial."

When she got out of the cab, Mrs. Strong handed the driver a few cards, and suggested that he might distribute them among his passengers. The cards bore a plea for support for the symphony drive.

Yesterday a letter arrived from Harry E. Mowery of 5313 P st. se. It said:

"I am the driver who took you from Georgetown to 1221 Connecticut ave. a few days ago. You may recall that you gave me some cards to distribute. I did my best and hope that the results will be good. Enclosed find my contribution to the symphony fund."

Orchestra Conductor Howard Mitchell grinned when he saw the letter, and said:

"That's the kind of support that will put this drive over. I love those small contributors, because there are so many of them—and this orchestra wants to play for all Washingtonians."

NEW YORK.—Tass, the Soviet news agency, announced this week that the Henry Luce enterprises, working in collaboration with the United States Intelligence Service, had assigned an American secret agent to Helsinki to photograph the Finish-Soviet frontier. The "agent' is a Life magazine photographer, who will photograph a wolf hunt in Finland two weeks from now.

The American Broadcasting Co. is bidding for the purchase of a New York newspaper.

Goering's combination rifle-shotgun, the only one in existence, has been acquired from the Goering estate by Film Director Howard Hawks . . . Hawks, who went to Europe to direct "I Was a Male War Bride," will receive a fantastic fee, because of the long delay caused by Ann Sheridan's pleurisy and Cary Grant's jaundice. Under Hawks' contract he'll draw overtime pay while waiting for their recovery, and it will be at the rate of $9600 a week.

Harold Arlen and E. Y. Harburg will write the music for the musical version of "Twentieth Century," which probably will costar Jose Ferrer and Lucille Ball.

George S. Kaufman watched two understudies go on in the place of the principals of a show, and proceed to overact. "They're not understudies," said Kaufman. "They're overstudies."

When Albert Einstein was introduced by a friend as "The Great Einstein," he said: "I'm not the Great Einstein. This incidentally, is both accurate and modest."

A prominent industrialist who arrived in New York at 2 a. m. went to the St. Regis, where his office has reserved accommodations for him. The bell-hop took him upstairs, opened a door, and the industrialist found himself in a cubicle which had only a bed and a wash-stand. He slept there, and in the morning he found another door in the cubicle and opened it gingerly. It led into a 4-room suite. He had slept in the suite's maid room.

Tallulah Bankhead went to a department store to buy a handbag. She was shown several bags but didn't like any of them. The salesgirl then showed her a bag which had a long strap to be worn over the shoulder. Miss Bankhead tried it, and said: "This strap-over-the-shoulder thing isn't for me. It gets in the way of The Chip."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

U. S. People Win French Visitors

By Drew Pearson

The historic journey of 49 French "40 Men-8 Horses" boxcars through the United States is just about over.

Pearson

The French committee of railroadmen, who spent months collecting the gifts that filled these cars, did not have the pleasure of seeing President Truman. Though urged to attend, Truman went to a concert a few blocks away from where they stood in the cold, presenting their gestare of friendship to the people of Washington.

Nor did George Allen, the Assistant Secretary of State, who annually asks Congress for several million dollars to promote cultural relations with the rest of the world, take the trouble to go out in the cold to greet the visiting Frenchmen.

The French Gratitude Train committee had performed this momentous task without one cent of help from Mr. Allen's budget or from any United States source; yet the State Department, though specifically requested to do so, was not willing to send automobiles to the railroad station to meet the French visitors.

However, Vice President Barkley, Senators Vandenberg and Connally, Attorney General Tom Clark and Undersecretary of State Jimmy Webb were out in the cold to greet the French.

And a great many Governors, mayors and patriotic citizens were far wiser and more hospitable than the State Department.. Gov. Tom Mabry of New Mexico sent his patrol cars across the desert to bring the French committee to Santa Fe; Gov. Frank Carlson got up early in the morning and rode with them all through Kansas. Governors Scott of North Carolina and Clements of Kentucky threw open their homes. Governors Gibson of Vermont, Dever of Massachusetts and Pastore of Rhode Island staged special dinners and lunches. Governor Warren of California traveled all across his State to greet them.

And so on—the hospitality list of the American people is to long to mention here and the net result is that these Frenchmen are going home enthusiastic rooters for the United States. They did not get to know Washington officialdom, but they did get to know the American people.

They were made Kentucky colonels, honorary citizens of Dallas, honorary members of the Lions Club of Cheyenne, Wyo., inspected the great Goodyear rubber plant at Akron, watched the Pueblo Indians dance in New Mexico and enjoyed the charm and hospitality of the South. And they are going back to France better ambassadors for the U. S. A. than 100 Jefferson Caffery's. For Jefferson Caffery—a better than average Ambassador—mixes only with the French upper crust who are friends of the United States anyway.

These French railroadmen, on the other hand, mingle with the workers of France—the people the Communists are trying to wean away and who to some extent have already been weaned away. They will mingle with the real people of France and they will be better ambassadors than any we have sent to Paris since Benjamin Franklin.

Take the case of M. Charles D'Hagues, a shop foreman of the French railways, as a member of the Gratitude Train. He appeared before the joint Legislatures of more States than Secretary of State Dean Acheson and probably as many as President Truman—the Legislatures of Vermont, Arizona and New Mexico. M. D'Hagues is from the backbone of France and he has met and mingled with the backbone of America. Thanks to the reception he received here, he is going back to France, back to his job as a shop foreman, to spread the gospel of America.

Most of our official Ambassadors give dinners and cocktail parties to which the upper crust of government are invited but it's the people of European countries, not the upper crust, who are deciding issues today. And while Secretary of State Acheson was so busy negotiating a North Atlantic pact that he could not greet the visiting Frenchmen he overlooked the fact that no treaty is worth more than the paper it's written on unless public opinion backs it up, and that arms shipped to Europe may fall into the hands of an enemy unless the men of Europe are ready to stand up and use those arms.

That is one of the most important points missed by the high-up planners. They are so far up in the stratosphere, so busy writing pacts and shipping arms to Europe, that they forget about people.
